Police capture escaped convict at Sixth St. home

by TOM VON MALDER

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison System, suspected of three armed robberies in the Northwest suburbs, yesterday was captured in Wheeling after police, with guns drawn, raided a house at 75 Sixth Street, Wheeling,

Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this morning in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on a charge of armed robbery. Kimple, with another prison escapec. John W. Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a m., Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven Food Store, 1089 W. Dunder Rd., according to Wheeling police.

Wheeling police, yesterday, would not give any other details of the arrest or how they knew of Kimple's presence in the village.

One Sixth Street resident, however, told The Herald he saw about five Wheeling police cars pull up in front of the John M. Korbel residence, 75 Sixth St., and policemen jump out with their weapons drawn, He said Police Chief Peter Guttilla was present during the raid.

From this man and other witnesses, The Herald was able to piece together an account of what allegedly took place on Sixth Street about 1 p m., yesterday.

AFTER POLICE arrived on the scene, they warned neighbors to go inside their homes and managed to get the Korbels out of the house. The Korbels were then driven several houses north along Sixth Street Police apparently waited some time before entering the house and Kimpel was allegedly caught as he tried to seave the house by the rear door.

Korbel, who said he was "upset over the whole business." also refused to answer questions. It is believed that Kimpel had met a girl who lived at the Korbel home, thus explaining his presence in

Some $700 cash and eight cartons of cigarets were taken in the Sunday 7-Eleven robbery, according to Wheeling police information released prior to the arrest of Kimpel. Police said two men entered the store, pretended to make purchases until all other customers left and then each pulled a revolver on the clerk, Patrick Loftus, of 102 E. Palatine Rd , Prospect Heights.

The men, both described as in their twenties, then used surgical tape to bind Loftus and took the money from the cash

ACTING ON information supplied by Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on Ill. Rte 19 and March 5 at the 7-Eleven Food Store on Bartlett Road. Both Kimpel and Larsh have been charged in these two robberies by Streamwood po-

Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

Storage man cometh

Is your house running out of room? Dave's got an idea that may be answer to space shortage

by STEVE NOVICE

If your neighbor isn't talking to you because you have a behemoth camper parked in your driveway and he thinks it is ugly out there.

If you tend to agree with him.

If you have lawn equipment, assorted junk and out of season clothes taking up space in your house where you'd like to put a pool table . . . DAVE FAESTEL might have the an-building where people in the surrounding area can rent space cheap to store things when they don't need them. The 46,000-square-foot building, proposed at the Barrington Square Park for Industry, Barrington and Hassell roads, is now up for consideration by the village's zoning board.

FAESTEL SAID there will be closed off areas, between 5-by-10 and 20-by-30 feet, available at costs now anticipated at 10 to 20 cents per square-foot per month. People renting the space will lease it on a one-month, six-month or one-year basis. Each area will be enclosed with ribbed steel siding. The renter will have his own key to the locker area and will have access between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. each day. There will also be 24-hour security.

The "self-storage facility" was successfully initiated in the southwest section of the country and has since spread across the land, said Faestel

They are operating or under construction in 75 locations throughout the United States, he added. He personally plans five locations in the Chicago Metropolitan area and says there is another firm planning a self-storage facility in the northern suburbs. WILL HE BE A success? To indicate he knows what he is doing, Faestel says he has four years experience in real estate sales and management during which he did $76 million in business Automobiles, furniture, boats, snowmobiles, camping equipment, business records, and small business inventories are just a few of the items he lists as acceptable for storage at the place he plans to build.

Space has been rented in facilities of this type as meeting area for Scout groups too, he added.

Anything combustable, explosives and unlawful items will be prohibited, he emphasized.

FAESTEL SAID the self-storage building will be an asset because 'it cleans up the community." There isn't a need for people to cover the open space around their house or apartment with sheds and vehicles, the whole area can become more attractive, he said.

"And the cost is lower than anyone else can provide," he said about alternatives . . . buying storage sheds from Sears, building an addition onto the house, or using storage space available from moving van lines.

Officials in the village are looking for a zoning category under which the selfstorage facility can be classified.

"It doesn't exist," Bob Valentino, zoning board chairman said this week. Officials also want to see marketing data showing the proposal will be successful.

ANOTHER CONCERN is the limited amount of space in Hoffman Estates zoned for industry. Officials want to know what advantages the storage facility will bring compared to the tax dollars and jobs manufacturing businesses pro-

Passolt needs help, will get it soon

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Mgr George Passolt needs help, and he may be getting it in the next month or two.

According to Passoit, he has been working under a heavy work load the past several months. He has often had to delay projects because he has no time to follow them through.

For example, Passolt is nearly a year behind schedule in keeping promises made to village employes during wage and salary negotiations last spring. Among the uncompleted items are the publication of an employe handbook, and the reevaluation of all job classifications.

The village was also delayed in receiving some of its federal revenue sharing funds last year because Passolt did not return the necessary forms to Washington on time.

Last fall, Passolt said he was hoping to provide funds in next year's budget to hire an assistant. Now, with the budget less than two months away, Passolt does not think he can wait. "I wanted to put it in for next year's budget," he said yesterday, "but it's becoming a real problem right away " THE PROBLEM WAS brought to a head last month when Passolt assumed the building and zoming responsibilities of indicted Building Director Wilham Bie-Bieber was granted a leave of absence with pay after he was inducted by a federal grand jury on 15 counts, including extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax return. The indictments returned against six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials followed a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

"I obviously can't handle all of the building and zoning," Passolt said. "I'm hoping to get someone to take over some of the zoning and part of the finance."

CURRENTLY, PASSOLT serves as village manager, finance director, zoning administrator and director of planning in addition to handling the building department duties. Passolt already has one admimstrative assistant, M. O. Horcher, who acts as purchasing agent and handles special projects for the manager.

Passolt said he has already asked the village board to approve the hiring of another assistant. "I definitely will be get-ting someone shortly," Passolt said. "But I haven't done any interviewing yet because I don't know what title I'm going to give it '

Passolt ruled out the possibility that someone will be hared to take over Breber's responsibilities. The building director is continuing to draw his $21,500a-year salary while on leave until charges against him are resolved.

According to Passolt, the village board has approved the idea of getting additional help. He said, however, the board has not yet decided where the new person should be placed.

Zoning decisions are the biggest time consumer, according to Passolt. He,

Cook county officials hit auto emission tests

Cook County Board members squirmed Monday under a federal requirement that the county begin testing car emissions for air pollution in 1975.

County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections next year The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief on receiving federal funds to pay for the Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent program.

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environm stand opposing the ordinance The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1,2

He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break

Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose.

Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards,

Elk Grove facing $6 million lawsuit

Elk Grove Village faces a $6 million lawsuit stemming from the Jan. 6 death of an Elk Grove Township woman who was refused ambulance service by the village. The suit was filed yesterday in federal court py Gary Pettee, resident of a subdivision in an unincorporated area of the township. During the emergency, a Elk Grove ambulance was dispatched and then recalled after it was determined the Pettee home was outside the village service area. The Roselle Fire Department, with whom Pettee contracted for fire protection service, handled the call instead, taking the woman, pregnant with her sixth child, to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

Wheeling police catch escapee

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison system was apprehended by Wheeling police yesterday when policemen entered a house on the north side of town with guns drawn.

Thomas Kimpel, with another prison escapee, John Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a.m. Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven food store, 1089 W. Dundee Rd., Wheeling, Larsh earlier had been picked up by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb.

Kimpel. Larsh and another man, Thomas Weaver, reportedly escaped from the Union Grove State Prison farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was severely beaten.

The alimony suit against a cloistered nun was continued yesterday until April 22 by Circuit Court Judge Robert Hunter because Sister Mary A. Lane has hired a new attorney. Her ex-husband, James Lane, 1605 Central Rd., Arlington Heights, has filed suit to end alimony payments because she is "remarried" to the church.

Sister Mary Lane, a novice of the Order of Dominican Sisters of Perpetual Rosary in Milwaukee, said she needs the allmony for medical expenses. She did not appear in court yesterday because the order is not permitted to leave church grounds, but Edward D. Rosenberg, attorney for Lane, said he will demand her court appearance.

Influenza hit Midwest hard

Midwestern states were hit hardest by influenza this winter, the National Center for Disease Control said yesterday. Outbreaks of the flu were declining and have not been as serious as in past years although 34 states reported the disease.

All the flu cases reported were of the type B strains usually known as Hong Kong flu. There were no cases of influenza A, the flu usually associated with worldwide epidemics. Dr. Robert Rubin, an NCDC epidemiologist, said Americans may have developed an immunity to A-type. Deaths from influenza and pneumonia are less than normal.

Ogilvie announces support of RTA

by STEVE FORSYTH

Former Illinois Governor Richard B. Ogilvie blasted opponents of the Regional Transportation Authority (RTA) referendum yesterday as he came out of political retirement to support the March 19

The RTA is in danger, he said, because of half-truths, apathy and the self-interest of a few politicians.

"I simply cannot understand the opposition," he said. "They make arguments that are obviously false. They use scare tactics. They say they are for an RTA, but not this RTA, and then propose an RTA that is politically and economically impossible. They raise a blizzard of trivial objections. They attack RTA proponents personally, instead of sticking to

At a press conference called by the RTA Citizens' Committee for Better Transportation, Ogilvie promised to make appearances in the suburbs this week to promote RTA. Recalling his work as governor to establish a mass transit region in Chicago, Ogilvie said, "I have been in the RTA fight for years and now I'm going to fight for it again.'

Executive director of the RTA Citizens' Committee is George Ranney Jr., who headed Ogilvie's task force on mass transportation in 1972. Ogilvie said he decided to make public appearances on behalf of the RTA at Ranney's request.

The former governor indicated he feels representation on the board is fair and the RTA will be fair to the suburbs. He predicted deterioration of existing mass transportation if the RTA referendum isn't passed next Tuesday

MENTIONING THAT he proposed the RTA in 1971 as governor, Ogilvie said, "That was years ago. The need is more critical now. Since I first started this fight, bus companies serving more than 50 suburban communities have failed. Commuter fares have gone up, in some Service is getting worse. The longer we wait, the worse things get."

He also disputed announcements by State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, that the RTA bill will still be law even if the referendum fails and that it can be amended by a simple majority and brought back for another referendum in November. Ogilvie said the RTA will have to go through the entire legislative procedure again if this referendum fails.

The present RTA bill has some points suggested in the task force report, but others have been dropped. That doesn't concern him, Ogilvie said, because no bill is exactly what anyone wants. The present bill is the best chance the suburbs have, he said.

Police begin search for porno models

An intensive search has begun by Chicago police to discover the identities of the approximately 100 children used as models in pornography allegedly produced by a Wheeling Township man.
Chicago photo studio owner Robert

Boyer, 49, of 1210 Boxwood Dr., near Mount Prospect, was charged with obscenity and indecent solicitation of a child last Thursday. Chicago and Cook County Sheriff's Police allegedly found more than 500,000 pornographic photos in Boyer's apartment and torture equipment at his studio.

Also arrested was Jack Klesert, 47, of 16 E. Willow Rd., near Mount Prospect and Wheeling, who allegedly set up the orgies for Boyer to photograph and film. Klesert has been charged with obscenity, being a keeper of a house of prostitution and felony pandering. Both will appear April 2 in the Niles branch of Cook Coun-

George Ranney Jr., executive director of the RTA Citizens Committee, said he will release a financial statement but would not say whether it would be before or after the election March 19. He said he couldn't comment specifically because it will be a big job to gather the figures. .

THE LARGEST contributions to the kNOw RTA Committee were from the Cook, DuPage, and Will County Farm Bureaus, Each gave $250. The McHenry and Kane County Farm Bureaus donated

The largest donation ($270) was from the Kane County Building and Construction Trades Council.

Individuals and political groups ac-counted for most of the remainder, with five $100 contributions, two $50 donations and 16 for $25 or less.

Included in the list of legislators who donated are Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, who paid for the first order of bumper stickers ($106) and Rep. Virginia Macdonald, R-Arlington Heights and Donald Totten, R-Hoffman Estates. State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, also was on the list.

Wilson's new programs to be announced

Prime Minister Harold Wilson yesterday completed a program to win popularity at home and confidence abroad, which could decide whether the minority Labor government survives. Wilson's plan to be announced by Queen Elizabeth at the opening of the new parliament today, is likely to ask for: increased pensions; curbs on skyrocketing prices subsidies for bread and other essential foods, and a stepped up home building program.

State won't accept rail abandonment plan

Illinois, Transportation Secretary Langhorne Bond testified yesterday that the state will not accept the federal government's plan to abandon 2,550 miles of freight railroad track. Bond said the plan, put together by the U.S. Department of Transportation, fails to consider the effects such an abandonment would have on communities and the state's economy.

Pick jury in trial of narcotics agents

A jury of seven men and five women was selected Monday for the trial of 10 narcotics agents charged with violating constitutional rights during a series of drug raids last April. The current trial will cover the first 12 counts of the indictment. A trial on another 5 counts will begin April 1.

Report 43 tapes not given to impeach unit

House Judiciary Committee sources said yesterday the White House has refused to give the panel 43 tapes for its impeachment inquiry, and not merely six as previously reported. The sources said the six tapes John Doar referred to last week were actually "six events" involving meetings with former aides. In related events: California charges against John Ehrlichman, David Young and G. Gordon Liddy - former White House aides indicted in connection with the Ellsberg break-in - will be dropped in favor of similar charges. In New York, the Mitchell-Stans trial was told financier Robert Vesco wrote a secret document to president Nixon's brother offering the U.S. government use of his far flung foreign operations on a "clandestine basis" if an ivestigation of his business affairs was dropped.

'Diet level' food costs reported

The rapid increase in the food prices during the past year has treated upper and middle income consumers comparatively easier than the poor, the Agriculture Department indicated yesterday. The cost to feed a family of four a "liberal diet," including beef roasts reached $64.60 a week in January, up 19.4 per cent. A "moderate diet" rose to $53.20, or 20.6 per cent and a "fow cost" diet climbed $41.70 or 21.5 per cent weekly. The "economy diet," used as the basis for food stamps, rose 22.3 per cent to $33.50 a week.

Charge Philadelphia police corruption.

The Pennsylvania Crime Commission yesterday officially released a report charging "ongoing, widespread systematic" corruption in the Philadelphia police department. The report, labeled as "hearsay, innuendo and unsubstantiated facts." by Police Commissioner Joseph O'Neill, was released after a judge denied a Fraternal Order of Police request to block it.

Congressional wives hear Kissinger

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, addressing a group of congressional wives yesterday said America's biggest diplomatic problem is convincing its ailies that they must cooperate with the United States or lose out in the end. He said, for example, that the oil crisis "faces all industrial nations simultaneously," but the U.S. is "more capable of solving it than any other nation in the world."

Servicemen prove they can streak, too

A fad of running in the alltogether spread to the trades unions yesterday as hardhats streaked across a building project in Philadelphia. Among streakers yesterday were three naked servicemen who ran through a women's Marines' barracks . . . but the back door was locked, so they had to backtrack and again race for the entrance.

In another development relating to the oil companies, Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., announced plans to introduce a bill this week to require that major producers obtain federal charters, thus assuring tighter controls over the industry.

'No firm date' on Israel-Syria talks

From United Press International Undersecretary of State Joseph Sisco said Monday it will be more than two weeks before Washington talks can be held with Israeli and Syrian representatives in an effort to halt continued fighting in the Mideast.

Sisco's assessment of the outlook came in testimony before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, where he said it will be at least two weeks before an Israeli representative arrives in Washington - and Syria will not send a negotiator until even later. State Department spokesman George Vest confirmed that "no firm date" has been set to open the talks, in which origi-

Hearst promises new try

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) - Randolph A. Hearst said Monday the $2 million food giveaway he established to try to win release of his kidnaped daughter would be revised to meet new demands of the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Hearst also said he would do everything he could to permit two imprisoned SLA members to make a nationwide television appearance, as demanded by the kidnapers. His daughter, Patricia, was abducted by the terrorist group on Feb.

Hearst said the "People in Need" food program. as established, did not meet the SLA demand. A. Ludlow Kramer,

Pat Nixon begins South American trip

• Hailed by her husband as "the best ambassador the United States has," Pat Nixon took off from Florida's Homestead Air Force Base Monday on a six-day, 9,000-mile goodwill trip to South America. President Nixon noted that Mrs. Nixon, the most traveled first lady in the nation's history, was making her trip while all the focus is on improved relations with the Soviet Union and China, but "our closest friends and neighbors are the people in Latin America." Nixon ended a Key Biscayne weekend a few hours later and returned to Washington, where he will meet today with Jordan's King Hussein. He and Mrs. Nixon will reunite Saturday - her 62nd birthday in Nashville at the dedication of the Grand Ole Opry's new home.

• During her South American swing, Mrs. Nixon will attend the inaugurations of the presidents of Venezuela and Brazil, the first of those today in Caracas where moderate leftist Carlos Andres Perez will be sworn in, and is expected to expand on his campaign pledge to nationalize the country's giant oil industry. Delegates from some 60 nations will be present, with the atmosphere much better than in 1958 when then Vice President and Mrs. Nixon were menaced and spat upon by leftists.

• The Equal Rights Amendment for women, defeated in the Louisiana House two years ago, is in for another battle with the same opponent in its way: Rep. Louise Johnson, a Bernice, La., insurance executive. Says she: "I'm already tempered for these libbers" and "ready for whatever they fire at me." Her big complaint is that "the bill promises nothing," not equal pay, equal opportunity or better jobs. A new vote is expected by

May, with five states still needed to ratify the amendment.

Heart patient has basics of good diet

I am 55 and have been a heart patient for the past year. I take Commadin and other medicines. I walk a mile a day and do my housework.

A year ago I weighed 155 pounds, now 140 pounds. I have to limit myself to 1,000 calories per day to control my weight. What I need to know is, how many of these should be protein, carbohydrates and fat? I know I have to keep the fat low, but, I'm afraid I'm getling too much carbohydrate.

I drink three glasses of one per cent skim milk a day and eat very few starchy foods. My carbohydrates come from vegetables, fruit, cereals, skim milk and one slice of bread a day.

You are getting over 150 calories of protein, or about 40 grams, from your skim milk. The new 1973 Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (from the National Research Council) for women over

I would think, though, that you should get some additional protein from other sources, including some lean fish, poultry and meat. ing to control your weight, it is wise to have a little more protein, but, otherwise, apparently most normal adults don't need more than 60 grams daily (240 calories of protein).

The rest of your calories can, and should, come from carbohydrates and a limited amount of fat. Vegetables, fruit, and cereal are fine foods. I would hope that your condition will permit you to be a little more active and a little less restrictive on your calories intake. A 1000 calories a day diet for a prolonged time is a marginal intake. I don't recommend this except under a doctor's supervision.

For more information on keeping a balanced diet write to me, in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10022, and ask for the "Balanced diet" booklet. Send 50 cents to cover costs.

Kindly tell me what causes the pressure when one has glaucoma? My doctor said no cataract. I am 75. He told me to use eye drops. Could there be a cancer? Should I follow a diet?

The eye normally produces a certain amount of fluid inside the eyeball all the time. It should gradually seep out. The balance between the amount of fluid formed and the amount that is leaked out determines how much pressure is inside the eye.

Some people have a defect in the normal drainage mechanism from the eye. It can be caused by many different things. This causes the pressure to increase and results in glaucoma. You do not need to have cataracts to have glaucoma. They are not the same thing.

Anyone who has glaucoma should follow his doctor's advice to the letter. It can make the difference between keeping your sight and not losing it. No, glaucoma is not caused by cancer.

Walker's budget gives state educators an uneasy choice

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts opersting yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

In a move described by one observer as "politically astate" and by the legislative author of the new state aid formula as "lousy." Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 million increase for next year.

However, Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the

The key division of funds, according to observers last week, will be between the state's year-old general school aid formula and the Illinois Downstate Teacher's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT), have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year, rather than match employe contributions

HOWEVER, DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the retirement program and to provide full funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer." range from a high of $170 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 million of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

BAKALIS HAS ALSO said he will propose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $38 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $146 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. He said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was

ence in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both parties, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

Curtis, Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing apples and oranges.

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental op-

While the legislative battle continues,

Strong said he thinks school districts should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for next vear.

"I think districts will be well advised to anticipate 92 per cent funding," he said. "Each district should plan to protect itself in its budget."

Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula." The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year. Strong said, "we may get into the position where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it calls for and we'll always be behind."

tioned for annexation and apparently is considering building the project under Lake County zoning.

Charles DeBruler refused to comment yesterday, saying his firm has not decided what it will do with the property. 'At this point it's not something that should concern the press or for that matter Buffalo Grove." he said.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said he has not talked recently with DeBruler about the development. "From what I have heard though, they are negotiating with a developer of quality single-family

LAST MONTH, DeBruler submitted a plan to the village calling for townhouses and single-family homes. At that time, he said it would not be financially feasible to make the entire project singlefamily homes because of land prices.

Larson said he has heard nothing about the company planning to build the project under Lake County zoning.

One village official, however, said DeBruler apparently was unhappy when he found out what it would cost for his company to hook into Buffalo Grove's water and sewer lines.

According to the official, the estimated cost per unit to connect with the village's water and sewer system would be about $793, considerably higher than the fees for unincorporated developments in Lake

ALTHOUGH NOT SURE of the exact rates for the village or the county, Larson said he thinks the village is about twice as much. Lake County officials could not be reached yesterday to obtain the exact amount for the tap on fees.

Besides saving on water and sewer fees, the developer by keeping the project in unincorporated Lake County also could avoid making donations to local schools, as well as not paying a $100 a unit annexation fee to the village. Under county zoning, the developer also would not be required to donate land for recre-

Under the village's resolution, The DeBruler Co. would be required to donate 13.5 acres to the park district and $158,500 to School Dist. 96. An additional $69,600 would be required for annexation

DeBRULER SAID EARLIER, that if his company chooses to annex to Buffalo Grove, it would pay all fees required by the village. At that time he said his firm had no plans to build the project under Lake County zoning.

Last month when the firm met with the plan commission in a workshop session, several commissioners said the density would have to be lowered in order for them to approve it. Whether or not that was instrumental in The DeBruler Co. reconsidering its plans is not known.

The 86 acres the firm has proposed developing is northeast of Rte. 83 and Arlington Heights Road.

Women of the First United Methodist Church of Palatine, 123 North Plum Grove Road, will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. following coffee and dessert at 7:30 in Fellowship Hall, A Film, "The Rapture" by Dave Wilkerson, will be introduced by Rev. Keck.

Dear Dorothy: You know how we all overlook things stored in freezers. I find a package of shrimp and one of veal scallopine, both iced over and strangely colored. I'm wondering whether the flavor will be "off" and if there is a safety problem. I've also had a package of hamburger there for maybe two months and a pound of bacon for maybe a month. Are they okay? - Rhea Hopkins

I'd doubt that either the shrimp or veal would be worth the cooking effort, even with camouflage. Both shrimp and veal kept too long get dry and tasteless. Assuming your freezer has a constant zeroor-less temperature, veal can be kept about four months, shrimp up to six. Hamburger should not be kept longer than six months, and it is never recommended to freeze bacon (although I know people who do it).

Every housewife ought to have a good freezer pamphiet on hand for guidance. I recommend the one done by Cornell. Send 50 cents to the Mailing Room, Building 7, Research Park, Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y. 14850. Ask for E1179, "Handbook on Freezing Foods."

Dear Dorothy: The insides of my stoneware cups are so stained that I'm embarrassed to even use them for the family. They're in perfect shape, otherwise. I'd be tempted to throw them out. Any ideas? - Maria Dorewahl

Fill them with a mild solution of chlorine bleach and water. I think you'll be surprised how quickly they'll become stain-free.

Cascais

From fishing village to a beautiful resort

Special To The Herald

A sailor from Cascals discovered America in 1480, but Americans are only now discovering Cascais, the fishing village that has become a resort on the Lisbon Coast of Portugal

Cascais fishermen still set sail early from the beaches, but now they share the ocean with pleasure craft, and they share the beach with sunworshippers.

Cascais (pronounced Kas-Kyesh) is just two miles down the coast from fashionable Estoril, and 18 miles from Lisbon. While royalty flocked to Estoril, writers and painters preferred picturesque Cascais

The hotels here range from small inns that charge less than $6 a day for a room with meals, to de luxe hotels that charge less than $20 a day per person for a room with bath, breakfast, dinner, taxes and tips. (Special rates are available on the tours of TAP, the Airline of Portug-

BESIDES THE SAND beach and the quaint town with its chic shops, Cascais has the added advantage of having sun year-round. The Sintra Mountains in back block the clouds from the north, giving the Lisbon Coast a micro-climate of its own. So more and more tourists are electing to stay on the Lisbon Coast, not only for its beauty and low cost, but also because the area is only a half hour from Lisbon by highway or electric

The fast trains, which leave Cascals every few minutes, run along the scenic coast ans top at Monte Estoril, Estoril, Carcavelos, and the other coastal towns that border the shore before arriving at the Soudre station in Lisbon, First class fare is 35 cents each way.

Cascais has its cultural amenities, especially a fine church with excellent wood paintings, and a museum that houses rare volumes and prehistoric relics.

But its unique attraction is that tourism has not changed it as it has many other picturesque places in other countries. The townsmen and the tourists blend harmoniously, each fascinated by the other.

The small harbor of Cascais has caused many a camera shutter to click faster, with the rainbow colored fishing boats pulled up on the beach, and the fishnets drying on the fine white sand.

You can sit at a cafe table across the road from the beach and see the fisherfolk, their faces sculpted by the sea and the winds, dressed in rough jerseys and jeans, walking past the Mercedes and Volkswagens withthe best of their catch in their hands, a gourmet main dish for their dinners.

They sell their catch of lobster, sardines and squid at the local fish auction, which still takes place in the main square. Very much unchanged except for the modern hotel the has sprouted in the background.

NATURALLY THE restaurants specialize in seafood. Washed down, of course, with the line local white wines. After dinner it is the custom to stroll to the local taberna for an after-dinner cordial. If you are lucky, you will be with a Portuguese friend who will tell you the story of Afonso Sanches

". . . It was in 1480 that Afonso Sanches left Cascais to be first mate on a Caravelle sailing to the Indies.

His boat was carried off westwards by strong tempests, until they arrived at what must have been a Caribbean island.

of Cascais, which is located on the Lisbon coast of Portugal.

Afonso and three surviving companions managed to sail the boat back as far as Madeira. Their exhaustion was so great that his companions soon died, but Afonso survived While in Madeira he met a Genoese who had just married the daughter of the governor general of Porto Santo, a nearby smaller island. Afonso told of land to the west, and he showed the ship's log to his new friend, a navigator named Christopher Columbus . . . "

On looking good after a flight

Ever look at pictures of glamour people stepping off a plane - waving and smiling - and looking fresh as morning sunshine?

And do YOU sometimes feel a bit bedraggled - and somewhat like a wet noodle - after a long flight?

Just a few simple tricks and tips can make your next long jet trip easier.

First - what to wear? Look smart, of course. Just be sure it's comfortable. Check what the weather and temperature will be at your destination, and dress for it.

For the gals on the go, pantsuits are perfect. But please don't wear belts - or anything binding. That means no girdles for sure! (Better plan on a good exercise program - and DIET - the month before you take off).

DON'T RUSH OUT and buy a new pair of shoes for your flight. Wear the loosest shoes in your closet because sometimes no matter what precautions you take, your fect will swell - especially on a transatiantic flight.

I have a friend who has a job that keeps her jetting back and forth to Europe several times a year, and she wouldn't think of boarding an airliner without wearing support hose. She tells me some of the airline hostesses wear them on long flights.

"I put them on while I'm lying in bed in the morning of the day I'll be flying before my feet have an chance to swell the least little bit. They really work!"

If you're planning to snooze, so you'll be bright-eyed and alert when you land, the best place to sit on the plane is over the wing. You'll have to sacrifice the view - but if there's something extraspecial to gape at, you can always get up and look out somebody else's window.

Whatever you do, try to avoid the seats in the tall - it's the roughest going Courses in photography, opera and general culture can be arranged through the services of Study in Rome Programs, with offices located in Miami, Fla. Spccial programs can also be set up for groups with particular areas of interest.

Already available for registration are three-week programs in opera appreciation, photograph Rome, and Roman civilization and culture. These courses are available each month of the year. Classes will be held at the centrally located American College of Rome.

Alitalia Airlines acts as carrier for the programs and all bookings are handled directly through the Mland Sales Office of Alitalia. The low excursion fare of 22 to 45 days is used to facilitate anyone wishing to remain on in the Eternal City beyond the term of the courses, to visit other points of interest.

Special programs can be arranged for university or college students in groups. and interested individuals should write requesting the color brochures and information available: Study In Rome Programs, P. O. Box 611. Coconut Grove,

Buddha mountain will be restored

by HARI HARTOJO

JOGJAKARTA, Indonesia - More than a thousand years ago, an army of artisans began carving the porous rock of a volcano on the island of Java.

The task took decades but they transformed the hilltop overlooking vast tropical plains into seven huge terraces 120 feet high which was called Borobudur the mountain of Buddha.

The 9th century undertaking was more than a marvel of architecture. It was decorated with the world's greatest collection of Buddhist bas-reliefs carved in

"In all respects, it is the largest, the most ancient and the most beautiful monument in the southern hemisphere and ranks among the finest in Asia.'

That quote did not come from a public relations man. It was made by Bernard P. Groslier, chief custodian of the monuments of fabled Angkor Wat in Cambodia during a visit to Borobudur in 1971.

UNESCO OFFICIALS liken the undertaking to those by the government of Eg-ypt at Abu Simbel and Philae, the government of Italy at Venice, and the government of Pakistan for Mohenjo Daro.

A major tourist attraction, Borobudur is about 25 miles northwest of Jogjakartà in central Java. It is said to be the biggest Buddhist temple in the world.

On the walls of the four lower square terraces, artists carved scenes depicting various episodes in the life of Buddha. There are more than three miles of carvings in all.

James McDivitt, UNESCO chief of mission, called Borobudur "one of those great monuments which have succeeded in capturing in stone the faith and aspirations of a great religion."

While UNESCO conducts the campaign to raise the millions of dollars needed, restoration work already has been started. Stones are being removed, cleaned, numbered and stored. A concrete foundation and drainage sewers will be built under each of the four square and three circular terraces before the carvings are refitted. It is hoped that by 1980, the mountain of Buddha will be restored to its ancient glory.

Proposed racing rules make sense

vestigating Commission under the direction of Charles Siragusa has recommendations pertaining to horse racing in Illinois.

The commission, a creature of the state General Assembly, has round sport and "no logic" allows proposed three substantial changes a ban on Sunday racing in the in the way horse racing is conducted in this state. The recom-

Longer terms for racing come up with some very sensible by state legislators and members dates would avoid the annual winof the Illinois Racing Board.

The commission recommends:

-Horse racing should be a year-

ter and spring confusion over the current year's dates and logically allow track owners to contract for needed services well in advance.

-a state run corps of racetrack security officers and investigators -racing dates should be should be created to bring uniform standards to track security.

Among other worthwhile recommendations by the commission are restructuring the size of the racing commission, giving track and horse owners a bigger piece of the handle and eliminating the 15 per cent admissions tax.

The commission also calls for the elimination of "paper associations" which hid former Gov. Otto Kerner and Secy. of State Paul Powell, and a complete ban on racetrack stock ownership by public officials.

Regarding the recommendations of the commission on dates, we couldn't agree more. Sunday racing and year-round racing seem to be logical - or rather it seems completely illogical to put an artificial ban on racing on certain days of the week or times of the year.

Likewise, a state controlled and trained staff of track security men would seem to give the sport a much needed group of professional policemen.

Siragusa's commission was charged with a complete investigation of Illinois racing following last year's scandals which proved personal meddling by politicians in the sport and hinted at fixed racing at almost all the Regarding Thomas H. Dittmer's letter regarding the evils of abortion, I have only one comment: here again we have the results of stupid, bigoted thinking, of half-truths and twisted logic, the worst of which is a comparison of the U.S. Supreme Court decision to the tacties of Adolf Hitler.

Unlike Hitler, the U.S. Supreme Court has not ordered anyone eliminated. The U.S. Supreme Court did decide that a woman has a legal right to decide for herself whether or not she wants an abortion. This decision also meant that no individual (take note, Mr. Dittmer), nor church, nor organization, has the right to try to cram its belief down the public throat

Mr. Dittmer, you wrote that "The right to life is the supreme right of God to give or to take away.

Have you talked to God lately, Mr. Dittmer? Did he tell you that? How do you know what God wants, other than what you have been taught by previous knowit-alis? In the Old Testament we read how God told the murderous Jews to treat their captives - "save the virgins" but kill the soldiers, plow 'em like fertili-

This sort of makes God sound like a sort of cosmic Hitler to me! Of course, God didn't say any such thing, but it was a helluva slick trick on the part of the Jewish leaders who could make their people believe anything - and they're still waiting for their Messiah!

You write, Mr. Dittmer, of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness!" I suggest you practice what you preach and permit others to pursue this philosophy without telling them how to do it, without deciding for them what is right and what is wrong in the mind of "God!"

Anti-abortion stand 'twisted logic'

Personally, I find it odd how bigoted fanatics are always convinced how "God" is on their side and/or just "know" what "God" wants!

When you, Mr. Dittmer, and your know-it-all kind are willing to take care of the thousands of unwanted children (that would be born into the world if you had your way), when you're willing to put out hard cash for the cost of their birth, for their food, clothing, medicine and schooling, when you're willing to put your money where your big mouth is you still will not have earned the right to tell other people how to live.

I would also suggest you keep the facts straight and quite twisting the truth to sult your own hell-fire-religion purposes. Tell it like it really is: that the United States Supreme Court is not forcing abortion on any woman; the decision only permits the individual woman to decide

'Streaking' it's all in what you make it

Last week I wrote a letter to my son who's in the Army and, lacking anything exciting to report, I elaborated upon my attempts to get to work on time, saying, "I went streaking out of the house - -

Yesterday I heard from the Red Cross - the kid had applied for emergency leave because he thought his mother had gone bananas and was leaving for work without any clothes on.

I don't really care if the college kids have hit on something new to gain attention, but I wish they'd keep me advised of the new language so I don't get the Army all shook up. The Red Cross lady who called me was most kind, right up to the minute with her vocabulary - and a trifle gabby.

"Unless there's a village ordinance against it and as long as you don't violate your office dress code, I don't know why you can't go streaking to work if you want to."

But, she said, she didn't think the Army would consider it reason for granting an emergency leave although John would probably get a sympathy card from the chaplain and several requests for his mother's address.

"Besides, honey, if your household is anything like mine I doubt if your son would spend all that money to fly home just to see his mother streaking - after all, the whole family's been streaking in and out of the bathroom for years,

Then she chortled and said, "Shucks, I was streaking when I was five and my mother caught me and the little boy next door playing doctor.

I finally gave up trying to explain to her that when I wrote to my son "streaking" didn't mean what it did by the time he got the letter, and I thanked her and hung up. So now there's a regional chapter of the Red Cross that thinks there's a middle-aged matron somewhere in the

boonies who goes to work with just a pair of shoes on, but I don't care what anybody thinks as long as they keep the Army out of it. As far as I can tell, streaking seems to be mainly limited to males in college and is usually fraternity-sponsored and fueled with many tots of grog to ward off chill and any lingering inhibitions. If this is more than just a passing fad, though, you can be sure a campus woman's libber is going to demand equal rights and pretty soon streaking will become co-ed. Which will give parents one more thing to worry about, but I think everything will be allright as long as the kids keep

I doubt very much if streaking will catch on with the adult civilian population mostly because we're too busy earning a living and trying to avoid the flu. As I've learned, however, it will affect our language and all of us are going to have to make ourselves perfectly clear when we communicate. Already I'm not looking forward to keeping my appointment at the beauty parlor - I was going to do something about the color of my hair because the owner of the place told me he'd developed a new method of streaking.

I wish I knew what he meant.

Get ready: here comes the federal dough czar

WASHINGTON (UPI) - The American Bakers Association predicts the United States will have a bread shortage this summer unless the government curtails wheat exports.

This warning must be placed in the same category with last summer's warnings that America was headed for a gasoline shortage this winter.

Which is to say, we consumers have nothing to worry about.

As we now know from experience with the gas shortage, the government is geared to cope with any scarcity that might arise.

At this very moment, you may be sure, there is a prospective dough czar waiting in the wings ready to do for breaditarians what energy czar William Simon is doing for motorists.

According to the bakers, "bread, hamburger buns, birthday cakes and even pizza" could disappear from the shelves before the new wheat crop is harvested.

"People may have to stand in line for a loaf of bread, at much higher prices. the way they now wait in line to buy gasoline," their spokesman says.

If and when that happens, we can count on the government to work out some sort of allocation plan that will insure equitable distribution of our daily bread.

One possibility is the odd-even system. On even-numbered days, bakers would only sell products with an even number of letters, (bagels, biscuits, croutons, zwiback, pretzels, Melba toast, etc.). On odd-numbered days, sales would be limited to baked goods with an odd number of letters (doughnuts, hard rolls,

The dough czar must then decide whether bakers will be allowed to give preferential service to regular custom-

Suppose, for example, Mrs. Krust has a standing order for a dozen prune Danish once a week. Will the neighborhood delicatessen be permitted to hold them under the pastry counter until she arrives? Or must the clerk dispense them on a first-come, first-serve basis, forcing Mrs. Krust to settle for some day-old crumpets? Either way, the dough czar's job will be made easier by the fact that the bakers are referring to the threatened shortage as a "bread blackout."

That apparently means that only white bread will be unavailable. For if the shortage included brown bread, it would be called a "dimout." Dark bread, presumably, will remain plentiful. And that more or less assures the dough czar of a prominent place in history.

When informed that the people have no bread to eat, he can blithely reply: "Then let them eat pumpernickel."

Jeannette Mullen: the party's candidate for state treasurer

Harry Page believes the GOP needs a 'Downstate' candidate

by BOB LAHEY

If there is any doubt about who is the "party candidate" for the Republican nomination for state treasurer, it is quickly dispelled by glancing over the "laundry list" of GOP luminaries who have endorsed Jeannette Mullen of Bar-

The list includes names like Blehard Ogilvie, Hope McCormick, Charles Percy. George Lindberg, William Harris and W. Robert Blair, as well as numerous state legislators from throughout Illinois.

Such support is not surprising in the light of Mrs. Mullen's past association with Gov. Ogilvie. She was appointed by birn to administer the state bingo program when legislation reinstating legal bingo was passed during his administration. She served as a delegate to the Constitutional Convention in 1970, while Ogilvie was governor. And she was working on a tax relief plan for senior citizens. at Ogilvie's request when his administration came to its demise in the 1972 election.

It is not altogether because she is a woman that the Republican leaders want Mrs. Mullen on the ticket against State Treasurer Alan Dixon in November: nor is it altogether because she is a certified public accountant.

"BEING A CPA is not necessarily a great qualification for being state treasurer." she concedes, pointing out that the job is ebiefly administrative with little policymaking powers beyond deciding where to invest state funds.

But with the growing inclination of political parties to pick women for responsible positions, what being a CPA does for Mrs. Mullen "is to add to people's confidence - they know I'm not running for office to get out of the kitchen."

As for gaining support from the males in the GOP, who are learning to be enthused about women candidates, "They are relieved that I'm qualified," and the way she pronounces that word "qualified" puts quotation marks around it.

Her activities as state legislative chairman of the Illinois League of Women Voters from 1961 to 1969, as former assistant to the director of the American Steel Industries, her various posts with state government attest to the fact that she is not looking for a way to flee the

on has a good record as state treasurer." MRS. MULLEN and Page share the belief that the office of treasurer was greatly improved under Republican William J. Scott - mostly through instituting the practice of requiring banks to bid on interest rates to secure investments of state funds - and they/concede that Dixon has aggressively continued Scott's practices.

She believes, however, that there may be room for improvement in the office and one thing she would like to do is to appoint a committee of experts in banking and investment to explore new ways for the state to use its money.

Mrs. Mullen, as a Con-Con delegate, voted for the proposal to remove the treasurer's office from the election process and have it filled by appointment by the governor. While there may be advantages to having a treasurer who is not under the control of the governor, she also believes that appointing a treasurer would end the traditional "game" between the two officials of arguing how much money the state has available.

So why, then, run for the office? Well, for one thing, there is that Watergate business. As a lifelong Republican, Mrs. Mullen became concerned that people were shying away from public office.

When John Anderson (U.S. representative from Rockford and the GOP's first choice to challenge Democratic Sen. Adlai Stevenson) decided he wouldn't run, I decided I would.

"I am concerned about people getting turned off on our system of government. While I have been turned off by many individuals, I'm not turned off on the sysby BOB LAHEY

Harry Page wants to get back into public service, and he believes that the Republican Party needs him on the ballot to convince voters throughout the state that the GOP isn't cornering the market in public jobs for Cook County.

Page has been campaigning for the job of state treasurer for more than a year now, and one of the major points of his campaign is that every other Republican candidate for major office comes from 'a line north of the Cook county border."

That is, Page will readily admit, a sidestep from an argument that all the other candidates are from Cook County - his opponent for the Republican nomination for state treasurer, Jeannette Mullen of Barrington, in fact lives in Lake County - but she does live north of the Cook County border.

That probably is a factor of some importance to some Downstate voters. Given the traditional suspicion of downstaters toward Cook County, it must carry some weight when he points at a slate of Republicans who are all clustered around the Windy City.

That is a large part of the reason for Page's optimism that Illinois Republicans will nominate him on March 19 for the task of trying to unseat Democrat Alan J. Dixon as state treasurer.

He also recognizes that he is probably not going to do very well at the polls in Cook County in the March 19 primary, but that doesn't seem to worry him too I will," says Page.

Harry

HE HAS, HOWEVER, not abandoned Cook County, and believes there are enough ward committeemen in Chicago who support his candidacy to give him the kind of vote which he needs to hold Mrs. Mullen's expected majority down to an acceptable margin. Page says he will be satisfied with a 40 per cent vote in Cook County.

Beyond the considerations of counting the votes, Page also thinks that he has all the qualifications that are needed to carry out the duties of state treasurer.

That job, he says, is one of an administrator. And he believes his 22 years as an administrator of schools and school districts in Downstate Illinois, mostly in or around Springfield, has given him the necessary experience to carry out the duties of state treasurer.

"Budgeting for $1.5 million (as he did is just a matter of zeroes," says Page.

That business about getting back into public service refers to Page's previous roles as assistant state superintendent of public instruction when his brother, Ray, held that elected office, and later as administrative assistant to Attorney General William J. Scott.

PAGE, LIKE HIS GOP opponent, is an admirer of Scott, who held the job of treasurer before he was elected attorney general. Basically, he says, he will continue the duties of state treasurer along the guidelines that Scott established. Those include putting money held by the state into banks where it can earn the most interest, requiring bids from banks to bring that interest to the maximum.

Added to his public education history, his apprenticeship under brother Ray and Atty. Gen. Scott is a family tradition of political service. His father was a Republican precinct committeeman in Sangamon County for 44 years, and served as deputy county clerk in that

"I CAN'T RECALL when I didn't want to be a public official," says Page today. The role of state treasurer will satisfy that desire, he says. He wants no higher office. Page candidly quips that the treasurer's salary of $42,500 "might not be a handsome one for a Wall Street banker, but for Harry Page it is very adequate."

"If he can have the job of treasurer, says the $30,000-a-year, 44-year-old school administrator, he will be content to simply see to it that the state's money is adequately managed.

American history tells us to cool it in a crisis

By Donald F. Morton, President Arlington Heights Federal Savings & Loan Assn.

Lest today's political and economic tribulations weigh too heavily upon us, it is well to recall that our American ancestors thought themselves to be living in the worst of times.

The industrial revolution, with its uprush of factories and cities, also produced the phenomenon of periodic industrial collapse. The first smash of the machine-production age occurred in 1819; another came in 1829, and the third and most severe up to that time in 1837, It prompted the Detroit Free Press to pronounce with the voice of doom: "All is darkness and despair. As a nation we are at the bottom of the

The indecision of Franklin Pierce. who became our youngest president when he took office in 1853, earned him an evaluation as one of the most incompetent men over in the presidency. The national picture in 1857 caused the Philadelphia Gazette to exclaim: "Nothing in this country is safe, solvent, or reliable." Military victories were no preparation for Ulysses S. Grant as president of the United States. The panic of 1873 as he opened his second term, the political corruption of the high officials of his administration, and other ails provoked the New York World to the gloomy prediction: "Collapse is a grim reality. The days of the Republic are numbered.

A decade of waste that used up most of the nation's free capital, the delivery to market by the new railroads of so much wheat and cotton that they could not command a workable price, the flood of cheap silver and declining confidence in the maintenance of the gold standard brought on panic of 1893, prompting the New Orleans Picayune to note: "On every hand there is depression, wreck, and ruin. We can't go much further.'

"The old ship of state is sinking," decided the Wall Street Journal in 1907, after investigations of large corporations disclosed many abuses and created public distrust, leading to a declining stock market, runs on banks, and other signs of chaos.

(Some 67 years later, the Wall Street Journal takes a more optimistic view of our present situation. Last November 30, the Journal observed: "We owe the benefits and comforts of the present era to free enterprise and the scarcity of whales." from which came the whale and sperm oil that supplied artifical light until the Civil War. "The Petroleum Age will pass as did the Stone Age (and the Wale Oil Era)." commented the Journal, expressing confidence in technology to. see us through.

The lesson of American history seems to be to keep cool, don't despair, rely on the basic common sense of the American people and our political system to set things aright.

Tourney action opens at Arlington, Elgin

Wheeling battles Evanston; Conant, St. Charles collide

by ART MUGALIAN

It's that time again.

The sectional basketball tournaments have always meant excitement, unbridled joy, and bitter disappointment. That's the way it has to be. Someone has to win and someone has to - well, not

This year, for the second season in a row, sectionals also mean that three area teams - all from the Mid-Suburban League - will have a chance to continue on in the state tourney, perhaps all the way to Tournament Central in Champaign,

Only once in the Herald area has a team gotten as far as the Sweet Sixteen by winning a sectional title. Conant did it two years ago under coach Dick Redlinger, and again this year, Redlinger's squad has the opportunity to make it at feast that fur. They'll meet St. Charles todight at 7:30 in the opening round of the Elgin Sectional.

Wheeling and Hersey are still alive, and they are tangling in the talent-laden Arlington Sectional, featuring the state's No. 1 team, Maine South, and a charging Evanston five. Wheeling, with Ted Ecker at the coaching reins, meets Evanston tonight at 7:30, and Roger Steingraber's Hersey quintet clashes with Maine South Wednesday evening at the same time.

Redlinger knows what his Conant team has to do from now on out. "I've got all the confidence in our kids if they just play ball for 32 minutes instead of four or five," the coach said. "I think we can beat St. Charles and I think we can win the sectional."

The St. Charles Saints (13-14) are practically the same team, personnel-wise, as last year's Saints who defeated Palatine in the sectionals. The big difference this season is the absence of Mark Vitali.

"Without Vitali, they've had a leadership problem," Redlinger noted. "Our scouting report indicates that if you can stop (Jeff) Howard and (Lance) Erickson, then you can beat them."

The Conant coach sees an inconsistency on offense as his team's main' weakness. "I actually feel that if we can get the ball moving, if we're patient on offense, we can practically score at will. But when we're ahead, we tend to relax a lot of the time.

"We're not the best team in the state."

Redlinger

Redlinger conceded, "but on any given night I think we can play with anyone."

Conant won the trip to Elgin by defeating Schaumburg and Fremd in the regional tourney at Schaumburg last week. "I felt we could have scored whenever we wanted to," Redlinger said after the close, 63-61 win over Fremd on Friday. "But it was typical of our kids. In the first few minutes of the game, they saw just what they had to do to win, and they

The Congars' starting five includes three all-conference players - six-foot-8 center Steve Irion, 6-5 forward Roger Sander, and 6-4 forward Dave Sutherland. The two guards - Tom Bowen and Jeff Ironside - have been evershadowed most of the year by the tall front line, but they are an instrumental part of Conant's attack and they make up the outer prongs of the Cougars' tough 2-3 zone de-winner of the St. Patrick-Elgin game.

Tickets may still be purchased for tonight's game at Elgin. They will be on sale from 7:30 a.m. to noon at Conant High School at $1.50 each.

"Now it boils down to desire," said Wheeling coach Ted Ecker. His Wildcats will face the Evanston Wildkits of Jack Burmaster tonight.

"Evanston has a thing going for them – tradition," Ecker said. "They've gotten through the sectionals before and they've been downstate. But my kids have their eyes on something - they're bound and determined. If you can get hot this time of the year, conviction can take yon a long way."

Wheeling, 19-6, got this far by nipping Arlington in the finals of the Forest View regional, 68-63. Ecker pointed to the fine defensive game his boys played. "(Dan) Donahue got his 33 points, but (Bill) Pickler did a great job on him most of the game. And we took the game away from their other players.

"Constancy is important now in rebounding and defense," the 'Cat coach continued. "Offensively, we'll change according to several factors, but on defense we have to stay preity much the same." Of Wheeling's five starters, George Kaage, Scott Keenan, and Pickler were named to the Mid-Suburban League allconference team. Bill Kenney and Bob Westrich round out the first squad:

"This is a real team effort," said Ecker, "There's no super-star on our team - but we have lots of balance. We had three kids on the all-conference team and Kenney wasn't even one of them. He makes us go. But you can't stop one kid and hold us down.*

Ecker would probably welcome some taller players, but he's not complaining. "Obviously, our size is a weakness," he said. "You just have to look at us to see that. Guys with size are definitely going to have more of an advantage."

But the coach minimizes the importance of height, at least against Evanston. "I don't think they're as strong as we are," Ecker said of the Wildkits, 13-9 for the season, "and they're not any taller than we are, so unless they can jump higher than our 6-4 kids, we'll be all

Hersey honors state champs with assembly

morning. As Principal Reland Goins pointed out, "There's about 1,000 schools in this state and 999 are going through the Monday monring blues. But here at Hersey, we have something to cheer Director of Student Activities Boyd Salm encouraged a thunderous round of applause when he acknowledged, "Gymnastics on the high school level in Illinois is considered the best in the nation. And to win the state championship is comparable to winning the national championship." Head symmetries ceach Den Von Ebers was greeted by a standing ovation before he introduced each member of the leam, emphasizing, "To accomplish the ultimate in gymnastics, you can't do it alone. It has to be a complete team effort and that's exac^tly what we got. "These boys have never worked harder or more diligently toward a goal. Their finest asset was their compatibility. They stuck together, worked together and played together.' On behalf of Hersey High School, Von Ebers presented the handsome first-place trophy to Dr. Edward Gilbert, Superintendent of District 214.

Those who were turned away, from the packed Prospect High School Fieldhouse Saturday night during the finals, will be able to see the Video-taped replay of the entire meet at 5 p.m. Saturday, March 16 on WGN-TV (Channel

Hersey's Bruce Freedman and Blaine Dahl of Rolling Meadows worked full time on getting a harness on the unpredictable horse made it pay off into two equally-divided shares of the coveled 1974 state side horse championship and helped the Huskies win the team trophy and the Mustangs finish third

The combo spent four full years preparing for that magic minute Saturday night amidst 8,000 eyes, the television camera lens and the broiling lights better known as the state meet at Prospect High School.

Blaine was up third in the finals and was fully aware of Tom Truedson's leadoff 90 routine when he took the green flag from Superior Judge Tom Walt-

Blaine went on to hit one of the best routines of his high school career The judges didn't keep it a secret. Splits of 9 2 0 2, 9 1 and 9.4 averaged into a 9.2.

"My fust reaction was that I was glad It was over " Dahl who finished fourth in the state finals last year with an 834, admitted

Execution keys Elk Grove

TLIGHT ON

Gymnastics Editor

Elk Grove head gymnastics coach Fred Gaines can only ponder what the mythical results of "his" state meet would have been

His state meet would have included a healthy Bill Bosslet who had to forego competing in all-around because of a wrist injury that limited him only to horizontal bar and still rings routines

"The way our other kids performed tonight, there's no telling where we would have wound up with Blli healthy," Gaines said 'We'd probably be talking in the neighborhood of 40-45 more points and that means that other teams would be dropping down "

it's incredible that Bosslet was able to work any piece at all. A piercing pain reminded him of a nusty fall off his rings nasts in the meet had their same tricks, dismount at the Mid-Suburban League meet almost a month ago.

Ice treatments and a heavy taping dulled the sensation and permitted him to withstand the pressure of state meet finals before a turn away crowd at Prospect High School

The abbreviated but gutsy performance earned scores of 8 9 on high bar and 8 45 on rings for 27 team points, but more importantly inspired the outmanned Grenadlers to a fourth-place finish in the state meet

Headlining the accomplishment were state champions Dave Hadley and Jack Henry - a pair of seasoned performers who were making their second appearances in Itlinois' high school spectacular

"Execution is what won it," Gaines said of each of his titlists. "Other gymbut none of them put them together as well as Dave and Jack,"

Hadley, who had bounced to the trampoline gold medal with an electrifying 92 set, was the state's sixthplace finisher in 1973 with an 8 5

"Boy, it sure felt like the best routine I've ever hit," Dave admitted "I felt comfortable at the height I was working and I guess I didn't travel on the bed Hadley had watched favorite Tom

McLean of Niles West register an 87 and York's Jim Broderick sky to a 90 set while waiting in the wings for his opportunity under the hot television lights

"Dave works without form pants," Gaines explained of his well-proportioned bouncer. "He's one of the few kids who can do that. He's got the right type of

Dave kept puncturing the center of the trampoline as he uncorked his full assortment of tricks and stuck his dismount right on the button for a very deserving 9 2 reward from the judges

Despite his obvious talent, the state meet will probably be a dead end for Dave Hadley since trampoline is not recognized as an Olympic event by colleges or universities "It's tough getting kids with the dedication Dave had," Games said, "It's hard finding trampoline specialists who will give us four full years with virtually no future although schools like Michigan do have some trampoline competition " Jack Henry's another of Elk Grove's polished gymnasts whose execution is difficult to heat The compact strongman sm vived the graeling want while every other gymnast had performed before his name was announced by the public address system.

As the final competitor on the concluding rings event, Jack described the tension of the three-hour ordeal "I kept busy as best I could by yelling for the rest of the team, but once they started rings, I began trying to concentrate on my routine ' Thirteen performers worked the apparatus ahead of Jack and scores like the

9 05 by Addison Trail's Tom Ware and the 8 96's by Niles West's Bart Conner and Rolling Meadows' Mike Godawa were already established. But nothing - not even Hersey's premature team celebration - was about to rattle Henry. As if manipulated by remote control, the stellar senior was never better in the opinion of the judges who unveiled splits of 9 3, 5.3, 9.4 and 9.4 for a remarkable 9 35 average. Henry, who tied for fifth as a junuor in his specialty with an 855, was almost an all-arounder, according to Games "He can tumble and do grants on high ber, but he really didn't care about horse, which I guess is understandable. But I think he regrets not giving it a try He did a good job for us on parallel bars this

With two state champions of that caliber and a healthy Bill Bosslet whom Gaines tagged as "the best skilled gymnast in terms of talent we've ever had," Elk Grove may never know what might have been at the 1974 state meet.

Evanston's stellar all arounder Mark Trippel was honored as Illmois' Outstanding Senior Gymnast by the Illinois High School Gymnastics Coaches Association prior to the state finals at Prospect

Timpel a National Honor Society Student, paced the state in floor exercise during the regular season, won the Suburban League title the state district trophy with a 9 35 and the sectional crown with a 91 before topping the season with a fourth-place 8 8 in the gym finals

Trippel was also very valuable as an all-around performer. In addition to his success on the floor he generated a 6 15 on side horse an $1 on horizontal bar. an 8 15 on parallel bars and an 8 45 on still rings at the state meet

It marks the second year that the coach's association has presented the award Last year's first recipient was Elk Grove's Scott Phillips who has since become a standout collegiate competitor for the University of Oregon

The capacity crowd attending the state finals at Prospect Saturday night numbered nearly 3,300 according to Prospect's Ticket Manager Jim Kunnen vault for the Mustangs (12 feet) and he grabbed a third in the 50 (:06.1). Harris joined Sutton, Frank Eckert, indoor quad at Wheeling and Gary Olsen to take first for Meadows in the 880 relay in a time of 1:43.9. Jim Hupp was second in the 440 (:56.5), Tom Donlon was second in the shot put (42-7½), and Jim Huddleston was third in the 880 (2:12.7).

Rolling Meadows' distance men were routed by a fine display of running by Crystal Lake's Bill Santino, who won the mile in 4:35 and the two mile in a fine 9:26.2. Meadows' Mike Scott was second in each race (5:06 and 10:48.6).

LARRY TRAVIS WASN'T trying to make excuses for his Hersey track team, but he certainly had a reason to do it. "We didn't have (Jim) DiLenge or (Chris) Cooney," the Muskie coach said, after his team fell, 68-41, to Maine South last Thursday. "They were both sick, and we didn't get many seconds or thirds.

The last time out on the track, Di-Lenge and Cooney combined for four first place finishes. Still, Hersey managed six top spots without them against Maine South, including a pair from hurdler Craig Musser. He ran the 50-yard highs in :06.9 and he rattled off the lows run with a time of 9:53.6 and Jay McCarthy won the 880 in a neat time of 2:02.3. Glen Troy took the long jump for Hersey at 19-10, followed by fellow Huskies Jim Spicuzza (19-21/2) and Mark Zakula (19-11/2), and Zakula won the high jump at 5-8, with Scott Sowers right behind (5-6). Zakula was second in the 50yard dash (:05.8) and Dave Jones was third in the mile run (4:44.4).

IT HAS BEEN a slow start for Bruce Samoore's Arlington track team this season. The Cardinals competed in only their second indoor meet Saturday at Niles West, and they managed a third place finish with 49 points behind 72 for Niles, 71 for Glenbrook South, and ahead of St. Patrick's 18.

Dave Hillert captured his second straight pole vault victory, clearing the bar this time at 11-6, Jeff Dillon grabbed a first in the 50-yard dash at :06.0, and Mike Dolinajec took first place in the 440 with a time of :56.2, just edging out teammate Craig Bernhardy's :56.5.

Tim Cripe was second in the pole vault (10 feet), Jim Green took second in the shot put (46-3), and the Arlington 12-lap relay team came in second. Bernhardy was third in the long jump (18-101/4), Bill Sweeney came in third in the high jump (5-6), and Greg Hansen was third in the 880 (2:11.9).

NON-CONFERENCE RECORD: 57-55

The Wildent coach knows that Pickier and Kaage can handle the rugged board action that is certain to develop tonight. His two frontliners have outrebounded tailer opponents all year.

"Evanston is not particularly a ran-ning ball club." said Ecker. "They have a comple guys with tots of quickness and they take advantage of turnovers, but they're not really a fast-breaking team.

They've been playing a 1-3-1 zone defense with a halicourt press and it's been quite valuable for them. But I consider us a good outside shooting team so maybe we can solve the zone.

"If we play hard and have a good offensive night, there's no telling how far we can go," the Wheeling coach con-

May change building plans too

Link Farm developer may not seek village annex

by JOE FRANZ

The DeBruter Co. apparently is reconsidering its plan for developing the Sophie Link Farm north of Buffalo Grove and may not seek annexation of the property to the village, The Herald has learned.

About a month ago, the firm announced it had an option to buy the property and planned to annex it to Buffalo Grove, Yesterday, however, village officials said the company had not yet petitioned for annexation and apparently is considering building the project under Lake County zoning.

Charles DeBruler refused to comment yesterday, saying his firm has not declded what it will do with the property. "At this point it's not something that should concern the press or for that matter Buffalo Grove," he said.

Village Mgr. Daniel Larson said he has not talked recently with DeBruler about the development. "From what I have heard though, they are negotiating with a developer of quality single-family homes."

LAST MONTH, DeBruler submitted a plan to the village calling for townhouses and single-family homes. At that time, he said it would not be financially feasible to make the entire project single-family homes because of land prices.

Larson said he has heard nothing about the company planning to build the project under Lake County zoning.

One village official, however, said DeBruler apparently was unhappy when he found out what it would cost for his company to hook into Buffalo Grove's water and sewer lines.

According to the official, the estimated cost per unit to connect with the village's water and sewer system would be about $793, considerably higher than the fees for unincorporated developments in Lake County.

ALTHOUGH NOT SURE of the exact rates for the village or the county, Larson said he thinks the village is about twice as much. Lake County officials could not be reached yesterday to obtain the exact amount for the tap on fees.

Besides saving on water and sewer fees, the developer by keeping the project in unincorporated Lake County also could avoid making donations to local schools, as well as not paying a $100 a unit annexation fee to the village. Under county zoning, the developer also would not be required to donate land for recreation.

Under the village's resolution, The DeBruler Co. would be required to donate 13.5 acres to the park district and $158,500 to School Dist. 96. An additional $69,600 would be required for annexation fees.

DeBRULER SAID EARLIER, that if his company chooses to annex to Buffelo Grove, it would pay all fees required by the village. At that time he said his firm had no plans to build the project under Lake County zoning.

Last month when the firm met with the plan commission in a workshop session, several commissioners said the density would have to be lowered in order for them to approve it. Whether or not that was instrumental in The DeBruler Co, reconsidering its plans is not known.

The 86 acres the firm has proposed developing is northeast of Rte. 83 and Arlington Heights Road.

Wheeling police nab Wisconsin prison escapee

by TOM VON MALDER

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison System, suspected of three armed robberies in the Northwest suburbs, yesterday was captured in Wheeling after police, with guns drawn, raided a house at 75 Sixth Street, Wheeling. Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this

Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this morning in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on a charge of armed robbery. Kimple, with another prison escapee, John W. Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a.m., Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven Food Store, 1089 W. Dundee Rd., according to Wheeling police.

Wheeling police, yesterday, would not give any other details of the arrest or how they knew of Kimple's presence in the village.

One Sixth Street resident, however, told The Herald he saw about five Wheeling police cars pull up in front of the John M. Korbel residence, 75 Sixth St., and policemen jump out with their weapons drawn. He said Police Chief Peter Guttilla was present during the raid.

Faestel, 29, lives in Hoffman Estates and wants to build a warehouse-type building where people in the surrounding area can rent space cheap to store things when they don't need them.

The 46,000-square-foot building, proposed at the Barrington Square Park for Industry, Barrington and Hassell roads, is now up for consideration by the village's zoning board.

FAESTEL SAID there will be closed off areas, between 5-by-10 and 20-by-30 feet, available at costs now anticipated at 10 to 20 cents per square-foot per month.

People renting the space will lease it on a one-month, six-month or one-year basis. Each area will be enclosed with ribbed steel siding. The renter will have his own key to the locker area and will have access between 7 a.m. and 9 p.m. each day. There will also be 24-hour security.

The "self-storage facility" was successfully initiated in the southwest section of the country and has since spread across the land, said Faestel.

They are operating or under construction in 75 locations throughout the United States, he added.

He personally plans five locations in the Chicago Metropolitan area and says there is another firm planning a self-storage facility in the northern suburbs.

Anything combustable, explosives and unlawful items will be prohibited, he emphasized.

FAESTEL SAID the self-storage building will be an asset because 'it cleans up the community." There isn't a need for people to cover the open space around their house or apartment with sheds and yehicles, the whole area can become more attractive, he said. "And the cost is lower than anyone else can provide," he said about alternatives . . . buying storage sheds from Sears, building an addition onto the house, or using storage space available from moving van lines.

Officials in the village are looking for a zoning category under which the self-storage facility can be classified.
"It doesn't exist," Bob Valentino, zoning board chairman said this week. Officials also want to see marketing data showing the proposal will be successful.

ANOTHER CONCERN is the limited amount of space in Hoffman Estates zoned for industry. Officials want to know what advantages the storage facility will bring compared to the tax dollars and jobs manufacturing businesses pro-

Faestel is researching these questions further and will report March 19, when the zoning board continues its hearing at 8 p.m. in the municipal building, 1200 N. Gannon Dr.

Be aware and involved theme for PTA luncheon

"Be aware and be involved" is the theme of the Dun-Lake Council of PTA Council luncheon set Wednesday from 12:30 to 3 p.m. at Riley School, 1209 Burr Oak, Arlington Heights.

Dorothey Benner, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers, will be guest at the event, open to all PTA members of the council. Dun-Lake Council represents member schools in districts 21 and 23.

Mrs. Benner was quoted in the February issue of "Illinois PTA Bulletin" for stating that PTA members should be more involved in community-wide matters, rather than concern themselves with fund raising for their schools.

Hostesses for the luncheon will be Saily Benoit, council secretary, and Sandy Burrofs, council president. Babysitting will be available by calling Mrs. Burrows at 394-1485.

County Board Pres, George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections next year.

The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

States Marine Corps Recruiting Service and sponsored by the General

Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent on receiving federal funds to pay for the program.

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environmental stand opposing the ordinance.

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

million cars at a cost of $3 1/2 million.

He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break even.

Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose.

Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards.

Walker's budget gives state educators an uneasy choice

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts operating yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

In a move described by one observer as "politically astute" and by the legislative author of the new state aid formula as "lousy." Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 million increase for next year.

However, Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the

The key division of funds, according to observers last week, will be between the state's year-old general school aid formula and the Illinois Downstate Teacher's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT), have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year, rather than match employe contributions to the fund.

HOWEVER, DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the retirement program and to provide full funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer," range from a high of $170 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 million of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

BAKALIS HAS ALSO said he will propose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $38 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $140 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. le said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was

HOFFMAN. WHO held a press conference in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both partles, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

THE HERALD

Curtis Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing apples and oranges."

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental op-

While the legislative battle continues,

Strong said he thinks school districts should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for next year. "I think districts will be well advised to anticipate 92 per cent funding," he said. "Each district should plan to protect itself in its budget."

Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula." The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year, Strong said, "we may get into the position where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it calls for and we'll always be behind."

On the installment plan

Race track officials agree to settle back-tax lawsuit

Madison Square Garden Corp., reportedly has agreed to settle a $5.6 million lawsuit filed by the state for back taxes owed by Arlington Park Race Track.

The taxes are due because of Arlington Park's practice from 1966-71 of dividing its summer racing season into two separate meets, and thereby paying a lower parimutuel tax.

An assistant in the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott said Monday that Madison Square Garden has agreed to pay the taxes on an installment schedule, probably over the next five years.

Time payments were agreed on, according to Asst. Atty. Gen. Herbert Caplan, because Madison Square Garden's financial statements indicated that a onetime payment would cripple racing operations at Arlington Park.

Jack Loome, president of Arlington Park and a director of Madison Square Garden Corp., called the settlement, "a bitter pill. But we're going to have to Underpayment of the taxes took place when Arlington Park was owned by Chicago Thoroughbred Enterprises (CTE), headed by Marje Everett who sold the track to Madison Square Garden Corp., which operated in a similar manner until Scott's court challenge. CTE has since been dissolved.

"The indebtedness was incurred by my predecessor and we have no avenue of recovery against her," Loome said.

THE SUBSTANTIAL payments due the state will not spell an end to racing at Arlington Park, he said, though they will be an added financial burden to the race track which has reported declining profits over the past three years.

Taxes on money wagered at Illinois race tracks are graduated according to the total amount of money bet during a meet. The parimutuel tax starts at 51/4 per cent on the first $5 million bet, and per cent on wagering over $60 million.

By, in effect, starting the betting total over in the middle of each racing season, Arlington Park paid a maximum of 8.75 taxes for the state. per cent during the 1966-71 seasons.

The summer season was divided between Arlington Park and Washington Park jockey clubs, divisions of CTE, although all the actual racing and wagering was done at Arlington Park.

During hearings before the Illinois Racing board in 1971, Scott announced that he would file suit to end the split bookkeeping practice and to collect back The announcement forced Arlington

Park to reapply for 1972 dates. The Illinois Supreme Court recently upheld the state's position, but final settlement of the lawsuit had been delayed pending a possible appeal or rehearing of

In addition to the betting taxes, Madison Square Garden will pay 6 per cent interest on the owed money, Caplan said.

Wheeling police nab convict

account of what allegedly took place on Sixth Street about 1 p.m., yesterday. AFTER POLICE arrived on the scene, they warned neighbors to go inside their homes and managed to get the Korbels out of the house. The Korbels were then driven several houses north along Sixth Street. Police apparently waited some time before entering the house and Kimpel was allegedly caught as he tried to leave the house by the rear door.

Korbel, who said he was "upset over the whole business," also refused to answer questions. It is believed that Kimpel had met a girl who lived at the Korbel home, thus explaining his presence in the house.

Police reportedly removed several bags of merchandise, possibly as evidence, from the house, and a blue car was towed from the scene.

Some $700 cash and eight cartons of cigarets were taken in the Sunday 7-Eleven robbery, according to Wheeling police information released prior to the arrest of Kimpel. Police said two men entered the store, pretended to make purchases until all other customers left and then each pulled a revolver on the Rd., Prospect Heights.

The men, both described as in their twenties, then used surgical tape to bind Loftus and took the money from the cash

ACTING ON information supplied by Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh. Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on Ill. Rte. 19 and March 5 at the 7-Eleven Food Store on Bartlett Road. Both Kimpel and Larsh have been charged in these two robberies by Streamwood po-

Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over 'to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

Contaminated candy reported

The Mount Prospect Village Health Department has issued a warning to residents to avoid eating chocolate produced by a Canadian firm because of possible contamination.

Marjorie C. Boswell, director of health services, said chocolates made by Regent Cho colates Ltd., of St. Hyacinthe, Quebec, are suspected of containing salmonella bacteria. Salmonella poisoning is characterized by fever and vomiting. Two pieces of the chocolate that have been analyzed have been found to be contaminated, and Regent products distributed in the U.S. have been recalled by the federal Food and Drug Adminis-

Mrs. Boswell asked that any resident o has candy with any of those labels call her office, 392-6000. Local stores are being contacted to remove the suspected candy from their shelves.

Passolt needs help-and he will get it

Wheeling Village Mgr. George Passolt needs help, and he may be getting it in the next month or two.

According to Passolt, he has been working under a heavy work load the past several months. He has often had to delay projects because he has no time to follow them through. For example, Passolt is nearly a year made to village employes during wage and salary negotiations last spring. Among the uncompleted items are the publication of an employe handbook, and the reevaluation of all job classifications. The village was also delayed in receiv-

THE PROBLEM WAS brought to a head last month when Passolt assumed the building and zoning responsibilities of indicted Building Director William Bie-Bieber was granted a leave of absence with pay after he was indicted by a federal grand jury on 15 counts, including extortion, conspiracy to commit extortion, perjury and filing a false income tax return. The indictments returned against six former and present Wheeling and Cook County officials followed a year-long investigation into alleged shakedowns in Wheeling.

"I obviously can't handle all of the building and zoning," Passolt said. "I'm hoping to get someone to take over some of the zoning and part of the finance."

CURRENTLY, PASSOLT serves as village manager, finance director, zoning administrator and director of planning in addition to handling the building department duties. Passolt already has one administrative assistant. M. O. Horcher. who acts as purchasing agent and handles special projects for the manager.

George Passolt: overworked?

Passolt said he has already asked the village board to approve the hiring of another assistant. "I definitely will be get-ting someone shortly," Passolt said. 'But I haven't done any interviewing yet because I don't know what title I'm going to give it."

Passolt ruled out the possibility that someone will be hired to take over Bieber's responsibilities. The building director is continuing to draw his $21,500a-year salary while on leave until charges against him are resolved.

According to Passolt, the village board has approved the idea of getting additional help. He said, however, the board has not yet decided where the new person should be placed.

Zoning decisions are the biggest time consumer, according to Passolt. He, therefore, would like someone who could handle some planning and zoning as well as some of the financial work.

BOARD MEMBERS have privately admitted that Passolt is overworked and needs an assistant of some sort. This, however, has not stopped the board from delegating numerous new projects to the village manager.

For example, during the recent accountability sessions, trustees directed Passok to follow up the various complaints made by residents. While several of the complaints have been resolved, others have taken a back seat to more pressing village problems. Likewise, the village manager's duties continue to increase with the village population. In the past four years, the village has nearly doubled in size, and estithe next year or two. Passolt said he hopes to hire someone to take on part of the increasing work load in the next month or two, as soon as he has time.

Botte headed fight against low-income units

LWV hits Behrel's choice to head housing commission

The Des Plaines League of Women Voters (LWV) has criticized the appointment of the former chairman of a citizens' group opposed to low and moderate-income housing to head the city's housing commission

A league statement, which questions the appointment of Joseph Botte, was sent to Mayor Herbert Behrel and all of the city's aldermen.

Botte and five other men were appointed to the commission last week. All were members of a special housing commission, which completed a year-long study of the city last fall

While the league probably will not take any further action regarding the appointments, a spokesman indicated the group wanted to go on the record as opposing the choice of Botte,

The LWV letter contends that the commission members should not have "preconceived notions.'

"How can the organizer of Citizens" Opposed to Low and Moderate Income Housing be a sultable chairman for the housing commission." the league said.

LWV PRESIDENT Sue D'Hondt said the league believes that the public should be aware of the situation.

The league also questioned the general effectiveness of the housing commission because of Botte's appointment.

"Government on all levels asks its citizens to serve as volunteers. How can any citizen volunteer in good faith to serve this community when commissions of this sort are formed?" the league asked.

Both Botte and the league were part of the controversial beginnings of the special housing commission when it was formed in 1972.

Formation of the permanent commission was one of the major recommendations made by the special commission

Efforts by pro low-income housing groups in 1971 to convince the city to establish zoning to allow the federally funded housing sparked the creation of the original panel.

At that time, the LWV called for the appointments of unbiased residents to the special commission. A survey taken by the league indicated the need for about 100 scattered low-income housing units in Des Plaines.

WHILE THE SPECIAL commission did not ignore the issue of low-income housing, it did recommend that all types of federally funded housing programs be studied by a permanent commission.

Several members of the special commission indicated they believed the issue of subsidized housing was too complex to be completely studied in just one year.

Prior to being named to the special commission, Botte campaigned against allowing the panel to study the issue of low-income housing.

In responding to the LWV letter, Botte said he planned to be "completely fair and objective" in his position as chairman of the commission.

"I try to be as fair as the league has been in this matter," Botte added.

He said he planned to keep an open mind and reserve a final decision until he sees whether a federally subsidized housing project will be of benefit to the people of Des Plaines.

Botte said the housing commission will probably hold its first meeting next month.

Railroad promises more Cumberland stop repairs

The Chicago and North Western Ry. has pledged to make additional repairs at its Cumberland Station in Des Plaines in response to complaints by a local com-James MacDonald, a railroad spokesman, said, "There were some temporary repairs made in December but we're waiting for the end of the freeze-thaw cycle to make more MacDonald's statement came in response to a complaint by Martin A. Morris, 1182 Wheeling Rd., Mount Prospect, who uses the Cumberland station. In a letter to railway officials, Morris complained of, "concrete slabs that have cracked, causing serious hazards to pedestrian trafic." despite asphalt patchwork that was done on the platform.

Morris also complained that lights were burned out, a plate glass window was cracked, station benches damaged and floors were unmopped. MacDonald said the railroad has regular maintenance crews that tend to the stations and added the company recently contracted with an outside firm 'to do a thorough job." HE ADDED more extensive repairs would be made on the platform cracks when the weather gets warmer. In explaining he was uneware of the broken glass and benches, he said vandals were probably to blame.

Jaycees sell fertilizer

"Give your grass and the Jaycees a headstart in '74" is the sales theme of the Elk Grove Village Jaycees fertilizer sale now under way The door-to-door sales campaign will run through March 30 Proceeds from the fund raising project will help finance Jaycee activities in the community.

On sale will be Weed and Feed at $6.50 per bag: American at $5.25 per bag: and Flower and Garden at $4.50 per bag Each bag covers 5,000 square feet.

A Jaycee will call on you to take your order or you may call 593-0876 or 956-1892 to place your order. The fertilizer will be delivered March 23 through 30.

"Railroad people don't smash the benches and break the windows, that's local talent," according to MacDonald, who added he would report the breakage.

Morris also said station floors are constantly unmopped and dirty but MacDonald said, "the floors could be cleaned every hour, from commuters tracking in salt and dirt, especially on inclement

'They've made extensive improvements in stations in Mout Prospect, Des Plaines, Edison Park and Jefferson Park in Chicago, but at Cumberland, absolutely nothing has been done," said Morris.

He called existing conditions there, totally unacceptable," charging maintenance has been poor since at least last November. "It sticks out like a sore thumb."

In January, another Mount Prospect man, Michael Brown, 1316 Mallard Ln, who commutes from the station voiced similar complaints about maintenance at

Cook county officials hit auto emission tests

Cook County Board members squirmed Monday under a federal requirement that the county begin testing car emissions for air pollution in 1975.

County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections next year.

The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop

Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent on receiving federal funds to pay for the program.

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environmental

Control Commission has already taken a million cars at a cost of $3½ million. stand opposing the ordinance

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose.

Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards.

Walker's budget gives state educators an uneasy choice

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts operating yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

In a move described by one observer as "politically astute" and by the legislalive author of the new state aid formula as "lousy." Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 million increase for next year.

However. Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the

The key division of funds, according to observers last week, will be between the state's year-old general school aid formula and the Illinois Downstate Teacher's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT), have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year, rather than match employe contributions

HOWEVER, DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the retirement program and to provide full funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer," range from a high of $170 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 milllon of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

pose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $38 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $140 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. He said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was passed.

HOFFMAN, WHO held a press conference in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both parties, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

Curtis Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing apples and oranges."

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental operation."

While the legislative battle continues.

Strong said he thinks school districts should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for

tect itself in its budget.'

Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula." The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year, Strong said, "we may get into the position where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it calls for and we'll always be behind."

Albert Einstein School PTA celebrated Founders Day at a recent meeting by presenting awards for service and leadership to five members.

A distinguished service member scroll was presented to Mike Matzuka, who has cared for the school's front lawn for a number of years.

A scroll was presented to board member Ruth Andros, who has served as secretary, program chairman and has been in charge of the bike safety program. A service award was presented to Pat

Kulla, who has the job of keeping parents informed. For the past two years, she has been cutting stencils and running off the PTA bulletins, yearbook and special notices. Madge Pitzaferro received a scroll for her services on the board as membership chairman and room mother. She is presently a lunchroom supervisor and in the spring she will be a teacher-mom for Project 444.

Joan Niemeyer, Einstein's secretary was presented a scroll for her personal care of all the chikiren at Einstein.

The Founders' Day Committee gave PTA member button awards to Al Mix. PTA treasurer; Ed Leuthner, PTA president and Geraid Buckler, principal and faculty advisor.

Large turnout boosts hopes for city bicentennial group

More than 120 residents turned out Sunday for the first Des Plaines bicentennial commission's town meeting at the Casa Royale, 783 Lee St.

"I feel very good about it," said David Wolf, chairman of the commission. "The attendance far exceeded any expectations of how many would turn out, and if that's any indication, the celebration will be beautiful."

The commission called the meeting to tell representatives of local organizations and individuals about local projects under consideration for the 1976 U.S. bicentennial celebration.

THE COMMISSION is currently considering undertaking a variety of projects consistent with three themes of the national celebrations.

One major project proposal has been the refurnishing and remodeling of the old city hall and turning it into a communlty meeting and information center and calling it "Heritage Hall." The new city hall, currently under construction next door, is scheduled to open next year.

"Based on the reception of the idea," said Wolf, "it seems to be pretty selfevident heritage hall is an attractive and popular projection."

Wolf said however, members will probably not decide on a major project until the commission's April meeting.

JAMES ANDROFF, a biology professor at Niles College of Loyola, also told the crowd he would ask the commission to study the possible preservation of a 30acre prairie on Northwest Highway considered to be one of the few virgin prairies in the state as a project.

Elk Grove Township man files action

Village facing $6 million lawsuit in Pettee death million by an Elk Grove Township man who filed a violation of civil libertles suit in federal court late yesterday.

The sult, filed by Gary Pettee, 277 Martha St., stems from the Jan. 6 death of his wife, Mrs. Jean Pettee, 36, Mrs. Pettee, pregnant with her sixth child, dled from a massive blood clot in the lungs. Following her death, controversy was raised over Elk Grove Village's handling of the emergency call from the Pettee home.

During the emergency, an ambulance was dispatched from the Elk Grove Village Fire Department, four blocks from the Pettee home, but was recalled. The Roselle Fire Department, six miles away, was called to handle the call instead. Mrs. Pettee was taken to Alexian Brothers Medical Center, three blocks from her home, where she was pronounced dead on arrival.

The Pettees, who lived in an unincorporated area and contracted with the

A recent state's attorney's investigation exonerated Elk Grove Village of any criminal negligence in the death.

The village has since changed its policy to provide fire protection service to unincorporated areas on a serve-now, pay-later basis. The Itasca Meadows subdivision in which the Pettees lived has contracted with the village for service. The contract ended several years of bitter argument over fees and legalities between residents and the village officials.

However, the state's attorney's office went to some lengths to investigate the issue. They subpoenaed all our records pertaining to our village policy and the incident itself and rendered a decision that there was no official or criminal neglect. What more can I say?" said Zettek.

"We have not received any official declaration of Mr. Pettee's intent to sue us other than news reports that the action was taken in federal court. Neither has our village attorney been so notified," he

Elks name Chief Jenkins top law officer of year

Elk Grove Village Police Chief Harry Jenkins has been given the first-annual "Elk Grove Law Enforcement Officer of the Year" award by the Order of Elks Lodge 2423.

Jenkins was honored by the Elks in recognition of his more than 10 years of service on the Elk Grove Village Police Department.

"We are recognizing an officer who has contributed much to help make our police department one of the finest in the area," said Al Krasnow of the Elks club.

Jenkins was described as a man who is active in his community and church in addition to being an innovative leader in police work.

THE CHIEF originated the central dispatch system now used by police departments in this area and was one of the first suburban police chiefs to use policemen in schools.

He developed the high school police counselor program now used in surrounding suburban areas as well as in the village.

He teaches Bible classes in a local Baptist church and is a member of the church choir.

Jenkins has written numerous articles for police law enforcement magazines and was a recent recipient of the national award presented by Law and Order magazine. He submitted an article in the 'Working With Youth," category.

Jenkins is a member of several law enforcement associations, including the Illinois Northwest Chiefs of Police Assn., the North Shore Chiefs Assn. and is a member of the board of directors of the Northwest Police Academy.

Grade school talent show set tonight

Youngsters of the Queen of Rosary Elementary School in Elk Grove Village will be doing a bit of "showing off" for their parents and teachers at today's 8 p.m. PTS meeting at the school.

The entertainment has the approval of the student council and staff and the acts are scheduled in the school's sixth annual talent show.

Students in grades one through eight put on two performances for students last week and the best of those acts were selected to show again at tonight's meet-

There are ballet, accordion, piano, song-and-dance and comedy acts.

Sister Mary Kathryn in charge of the show said the youngsters participating will be judged on talent, creativity, originality and costume.

Trophies and ribbons will be awarded in several categories at the evening performance. Judging will be in two levels, first through third grades and fourth through eighth grades.

There is no admission fee for the talent show which will be presented in Loretta Hall, 750 Elk Grove Blvd.

Trustees to review plans for Centex project tonight

Centex Builders' plans to develop a 102-acre parcel west of Ill. Rte. 53 in Elk Grove Village, which "bombed out" before the plan commission Saturday, will be reviewed by the village board today at 8 p.m.

The plan for single-family development was termed an "abomination," by village trustee Ed Kenna recently when he met with plan commission members to discuss the Centex plan.

The plan commission first saw plans for the 320 single-family home development in early July. Saturday, it made unanimous decision to recommend denial of the plan.

"Main criticism of the proposal is its internal street layout and lack of ingress and egress at the south end of the development to Meacham Road," said Richard Mc Grenera, plan commission chairman.

'After hours of deliberation, we began compiling a list of recommendations that would have to be adhered to before this commission could possibly recommend the village board approve the plan," McGrenera said.

When we saw how long the list was, we decided in all good conscience we could do nothing else but recommend the board deny the builder approval for this proposal and instruct him to come up with a better plan," he added.

McGRENERA SAID traffic problems, lack of walking access to the nearby Link Elementary School which would serve youngsters from the development and odd-sized lots are some of the things commission members object to.

"Technically, the tentative plat meets most of our subdivision ordinance requirements but this commission has an obligation to turn down a plan that has potential problems," he said.

Thomas Rettenbacher, building commissioner, said his main objections to the Centex development were, that at least 30 lots along Meacham Road showed 25foot easements at front and back lot

"This leaves very little buildable space on a lot even when it conforms to our village requirements," said Rettenba

"We have an obligation to incoming residents. They might want to add a room or add a garage in future years and we codld be faced with the task of telling them they can't do it," said Rettenba-

RETTENBACHER SAID several lots were of such odd shape that he questioned whether they were buildable lots. "I'd rather iron out all these problems before construction is scheduled to begin or this department wil find itself in the position of considering special variations for building some homes.

"I don't want to give approval to a layout that to all appearances is guaranteed to present problems for several homeowners," said Rettenbacher.

KENNA, WHO HAS been highly critical of the plan, predicted in February that unless street layout was substantially changed by the developer he'd ask that the board "throw out the plan and send the builder back to the drawing noon, Niehoff Pavilion.

Cook County Board members squirmed Monday under a federal requirement that the county begin testing car emissions for air poliution in 1975.

County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the Inspections next year.

The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chiago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent program.

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environmental

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

He said that even if some federal monev is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break

Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose.

Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet polluThe inside story

Walker's budget gives state educators an uneasy choice

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts operating yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

In a move described by one observer as "politically astute" and by the legislative author of the new state aid formula as "lousy," Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 miltion increase for next year.

However, Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the

mula and the Illinois Downstate Teach- retirement program and to provide full er's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT), have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year, rather than match employe contributions

HOWEVER. DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer." range from a high of $170 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 million of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

BAKALIS HAS ALSO said he will propose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $88 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $140 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. He said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was

HOFFMAN, WHO held a press confer- Strong said he thinks school districts ence in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both parties, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

Curtis Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing apples and oranges."

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental operation.'

While the legislative battle continues, should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for tect itself in its budget." Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula." The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year. Strong said, "we may get into the notition where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it caus to, and we it always be behind."

Dist. 54 wrapup

Physical exam rules upgraded

Children will not be permitted to enter kindergarten, first grade or fifth grade in Schaumburg Township Dist, 54 this fall until they have submitted to physical examinations.

Supt. Wayne Schaible said the district will "move up to the letter of the law" for 1974-75.

The physical exams are required by state law specifying children may not attend school without them. When the law was enacted. Dist. 54 permitted a grace period until December of each year before insisting on having the exams. The district then moved its deadline up to September, permitting children to start school but requiring the exams within a

In the year starting next fall, Schaible said, the district will aim for complete compliance.

School site accepted

The Dist. 54 Board of Education accepted donation of one school site last week, and learned another is not up to stan-

Children someday will be attending school in a building at the Village In The Park apartment complex, north of Golf Road. The donated site was accepted by formal resolution.

Marvin Lapicola, district business manager, said a site in the Centex development in Elk Grove Village, for Stevenson School, has a poor base. Additional compacting and clay must be brought to the site, at a cost estimated at $23,000, said Lapicola. Another $32,000 to $40,000 will be required for soil work in a proposed parking area and land for a potential school addition.

The board encouraged Lapicola to write a letter to Elk Grove Village seeking assistance in convincing Centex to improve the site before the school district accepts title.

Summer curriculum cuts

Children in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 will not be able to study conversational French or junior high level piano.

The two courses were dropped from the summer school curriculum approved by the board of education last week because of poor attendance last year.

Although there have been some changes in class locations. the rest of the curriculum remains the same as last year.

New chalk boards

New chalk and tack boards will grace classroom walls in Addams. Frost, Keller and Einstein schools in Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 when school opens next fail.

The board of education approved purchase last week of $4,788 worth of boards, to be used in addition to those existing. District employes will install the boards, at a labor cost estimated at about one-third the labor cost if the work had been included in the contract.

Also to be purchased are folding walls for Addams, Frost and Kelier school additions. The walls are to be purchased from three firms, for a total contract price of $10,765.

High school boundaries shift

Officials OK new boundaries

Education last night approved recommended changes in attendance boundaries involving Forest View, Prospect, Wheeling and Hersey high schools.

By a 4-to-1 vote with two members absent, the board approved an administration recommendation that next year the area south of Weller Creek in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 be shifted from the Forest View to Prospect attendance area and that the portion of Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 south of Palatine Road he transferred from Hersey to Wheeling.

The board also approved giving a series of options to students living in the

THE BOARD'S ACTION came in response to enrollment projections which indicate that if boundaries were unchanged, Forest View will be substantially over its 2,500 student capacity for the next five years, and that Wheeling High School will be under its capacity for the same period.

Supt. Edward Gilbert, in explaining the recommended shift of the Dist. 21 area from Hersey to Wheeling, said that as a result, the reduced enrollment at Hersey "will give us the opportunity to use Hersey the way it was designed to be used, as a vocational education center for students from all over the district."

The board's decision came after 11/2 hours of discussion with a crowd of over 100 persons, most of whom came from the Dist. 21 area. Residents of that area last year objected to the same proposed boundary change, which the board was then considering along with changes involved in the opening of Buffalo Grove

The group last year was led by Warren Schabinger, who is now a member of the Dist. 214 board. Schabinger was the only board member to vote against the proposed changes last night.

Members of the audience explained that they opposed the shift of their children from Hersey to Wheeling because, in the words of one, "We want to build continuity in our community." One woman objected to the board giving options to children whose older brothers and sisters vill be attending Hersey, She think you're discriminating against my two children because they don't have an older brother or sister who goes to Her-

Suspect in three armed robberies, too

by TOM VON MALDER

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison System, suspected of three armed robberies in the Northwest suburbs, vesterday was captured in Wheeling after police, with guns drawn, raided a house at 75 Sixth Street, Wheeling.

Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this morning in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on a charge of armed robbery. Kimple, with another prison escapee, John W. Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a.m., Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven Food Store, 1089 W. Dundee Rd., according to Wheeling police.

Wheeling police, yesterday, would not give any other details of the arrest or how they knew of Kimple's presence in

One Sixth Street resident, however, told The Herald he saw about five Wheeling police cars pull up in front of the John M. Korbel residence, 75 Sixth St., and policemen Jump out with their weapons drawn. He said Police Chief Peter Guttilia was present during the raid.

From this man and other witnesses, The Herald was able to piece together an account of what allegedly took place on

Sixth Street about 1 p.m., yesterday. AFTER POLICE arrived on the scene, they warned neighbors to go inside their homes and managed to get the Korbels out of the house. The Korbels were then driven several houses north along Sixth Street. Police apparently waited some time before entering the house and Kimpel was allegedly caught as he tried to reave the house by the rear door. Korbel, who said he was "upset over swer questions. It is believed that Kimpel had met a girl who lived at the Korbel home, thus explaining his presence in the house. Police reportedly removed several the whole business," also refused to an-

bags of merchandise, possibly as evidence, from the house, and a blue car was towed from the scene.

Some $700 cash and eight cartons of cigarets were taken in the Sunday 7-Eleven robbery, according to Wheeling police information released prior to the arrest of Kimpel. Police said two men entered the store, pretended to make purchases until all other customers left and then each pulled a revolver on the clerk. Patrick Loftus, of 102 E. Palatine Rd., Prospect Heights.

The men, both described as in their twenties, then used surgical tape to bind Loftus and took the money from the cash

ACTING ON information supplied by

Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh. Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on Ill. Rie. 19 and March 5 at the 7-Eleven Food Store on Bartlett Road. Both Kimpel and Larsh have been charged in these two robberies by Streamwood po-

Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

Track agrees to pay state back taxes

by KURT BAER

Madison Square Garden Corp., reportedly has agreed to settle a $5.6 million lawsuit filed by the state for back taxes owed by Arlington Park Race Track.

The taxes are due because of Arlington Park's practice from 1966-71 of dividing its summer racing season into two separate meets. and thereby paying a lower parimutuel tax.

An assistant in the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott said Monday that Madison Square Garden has agreed to pay the taxes on an installment schedule, probably over the next five years.

Police car total loss after weekend joy ride

An early morning joy ride in Palatine during the weekend ended in the total destruction of a Palatine police car and damage to several trees and a street

The ride began after Palatine patrolman Kenneth Mrozek arrived at the scene of a minor auto accident at Kitson Drive in the Winston Park subdivision at 2:30 a.m. Saturday.

According to police, one of the drivers in that accident, an 18-year-old Palatine man, drove off in Mrozek's squad car while the policeman questioned other people involved in the first accident, then hit several trees and a street light before flipping the police car over.

from police yesterday. He escaped from the joy ride with only a broken nose and severely bruised arm after he was pinned in the car in the crash. The driver was treated and released from Northwest Community Hospital Saturday

The incident happened in front of the home at 41 Kitson Drive. Palatine firemen were called to the scene and jacked up the car to release the youth and take him to the hospital.

Formal charges brought against the driver were not available. The police car track to Madison Square Garden Corp., which operated in a similar manner until Scott's court challenge. CTE has since been dissolved.

The indebtedness was incurred by my predecessor and we have no avenue of recovery against her," Loome said.

THE SUBSTANTIAL payments due the Arlington Park, he said, though they will be an added financial burden to the race track which has reported declining profits over the past three years. Taxes on money wagered at Illinois race tracks are graduated according to the total amount of money bet during a meet. The parimutuel tax starts at 51/4 per cent on the first $5 million bet, and climbs to 91/4 per cent on wagering over $60 million.

By, in effect, starting the betting total over in the middle of each racing season, Arlington Park paid a maximum of 8.75 per cent during the 1966-71 seasons.

The summer season was divided between Arlington Park and Washington Park jockey clubs, divisions of CTE, although all the actual racing and wagering was done at Arlington Park.

During hearings before the Illinois Racing board in 1971, Scott announced that he would file suit to end the split bookkeeping practice and to collect back taxes for the state.

The announcement forced Arlington Park to reapply for 1972 dates.

The Illinois Supreme Court recently upheld the state's position, but final settlement of the lawsuit had been delayed pending a possible appeal or rehearing of the case.

In addition to the betting taxes, Madison Square Garden will pay 6 per cent interest on the owed money, Caplan said.

Palanois Park homes' fume from gasoline

Gasoline has been identified as the source of gas fume leaks within homes in the Palancis Park subdivision but village officials have not determined how the gasoline is getting into the sewers.

"We have not found the villain yet," said Acting Village Mgr. James Bennett, adding there was no question that it is gasoline.

A leak in the gas tank of a service station in the area is believed to be causing the problem.

Pressure tests are now being conducted on all gas tanks in the area. The test involves filling the tanks to near capacity and applying air pressure. A loss of pressure indicates a leak somewhere in the tank

"The problem we have been having is most service stations don't have enough gas in their tanks to run the test," said Bennett. He said as the gasoline shortage in the area eases up it will be easier to conduct the tests.

NO SERVICE STATIONS will be eliminated until the pressure tests are conducted and the source of the problem is found, said Bennett. Underground sand and gravel veins make it possible for gasoline to travel several blocks into the sewer system, he explained.

The Metropolitan Sanitary District has been working with the village on the problem. If a leak in a gas tank is found a citation will be issued by MSD to the service station. The owner of the service station would then be required to formulate an acceptable plan for abating the problem.

Volatile readings of 10 per cent have been obtained by MSD from the sewers in Palanois Park. The readings are highest following a rain. Earl Knight, MSD assistant chief engineer, said volatile readings are not considered dangerous until they reach 80 or 90 per cent.

RESIDENTS OF THE subdivision west of Rohlwing Road and south of Palatine Road have complained of gas odors in their homes at various times over the past seven years. The residents have met with village officials twice this year to discuss the problem. Interim measures taken by the village until the problem can be eliminated are: installation of vented sewer covers, investigation of businesses in the area, removal of gas storage tanks from abandoned gas stations, and monitoring

Residents have also been advised of several precautionary measures they can take including checking for cracks in their sewer, installing water taps and using a pail of water to flush floor drains at least

Cook county officials hit auto emission tests

Cook County Board members squirmed Monday under a federal requirement that the county begin testing car emissions for air pollution in 1975. County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections text year.

The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent on receiving federal funds to pay for the program.

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environmental Control Commission has already taken a million cars at a cost of $3½ million. stand opposing the ordinance.

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break

Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose. Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards.

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts operating yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

in a move described by one observer as "politically astute" and by the legislative author of the new state aid formula as "lousy," Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 million increase for next year.

However. Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the

The key division of funds, according to observers last week, will be between the state's year-old general school ald formula and the lilinois Downstate Teacher's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois .Federation of Teachers (IFT), have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year. rather than match employe contributions

HOWEVER, DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the retirement program and to provide full funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer," range from a high of $1.70 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 million of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

BAKALIS HAS ALSO said he will propose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $38 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $140 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. He said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was

HOFFMAN, WHO held a press conference in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both parties, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

Curtis Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing apples and oranges.'

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental op-

While the legislative battle continues,

Strong said he thinks school districts should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for next year. "I think districts will be well advised to anticipate 92 per cent funding," he said, "Each district should plan to protect itself in its budget." Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula" The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year, Strong said, "we may get into the position where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it calls for and we'll always be behind."

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison System, suspected of three armed robberies in the Northwest suburbs, yesterday was captured in Wheeling after police, with guns drawn, raided a house at 75 Sixth Street. Wheeling.

Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this morning in the Artington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on a charge of armed robbery. Kimple, with another prison escapee, John W. Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a.m., Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven Food Store, 1089 W. Dundee Rd., according to Wheeling police.

Wheeling police, yesterday, would not give any other details of the arrest or how they knew of Kimple's presence in the village.

One Sixth Street resident, however, told The Herald he saw about five Wheeling police cars pull up in front of the John M. Korbel residence, 75 Sixth St., and pollcemen jump out with their weapons drawn. He said Police Chief Peter Guttilla was present during the raid.

From this man and other witnesses, The Herald was able to piece together an account of what allegedly took place on Sixth Street about 1 p.m., yesterday.

AFTER POLICE arrived on the scene, they warned neighbors to go inside their homes and managed to get the Korbels out of the house. The Korbels were then driven several houses north along Sixth Street. Police apparently waited some time before entering the house and Kimpel was allegedly caught as he tried to eave the house by the rear door.

Korbel, who said he was "upset over the whole business," also refused to answer questions. It is believed that Kimpel had met a girl who lived at the Korbel home, thus explaining his presence in the house.

Police reportedly removed bags of merchandise, possibly as evidence, from the house, and a blue car was towed from the scene.

Some $700 cash and eight cartons of cigarets were taken in the Sunday 7-Eleven robbery, according to Wheeling

ACTING ON information supplied by Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh. Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on Ill. Rte. 19 and March 5 at the 7-Eleven Food Store on Bartlett Road. Both Kimpel and Larsh have been charged in these two robberies by Streamwood po-

Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed cobberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

Annexation to parks, village on agenda

Future annexations to the Palatine Park District and village will be discussed at 7:30 p.m. today at a Palatine park district meeting in village hall, 54 S. Brockway St., Palatine.

Second place winners are Sharon Tomin of Palatine Hills for a study on whether dogs can see colors; Mike Lavalle of Winston Park for "A Statistical Analysis of Possible Correlation Between Eye Pigments and Myopia;" and John Brown of Plum Grove for his project on whether excessive carbon dioxide affects plants: Jennifer Bell of Palatine Hills for a study on purification plants and Brett Romaine and Ken Kusial of Carl Sandburg for a study on sound. The youngsters also won a one-year subscription to a science magazine. The prize was presented by the district.

Panel reviews salary hike for city workers

Revised budget figures, including pro-posed 8 per cent cost of living salary increases for city employes and expected expense needs for the city in fiscal 1975, were reviewed last night by the finance committee of the Rolling Meadows City Council.

The revised figures presented show a change in the expected budget for next year from the $3,450,750 considered two weeks ago to $3,639,750.

The revised figures do not include any expenditures for new equipment, the hiring of additional personnel, or any capital improvements for the city.

HOWEVER, SEVERAL priority expenditures, including the hiring of several additional firemen, may be recommended to the city council by City Mgr. James Watson. Watson, the city's budget officer, indicated last night he may suggest that the city hire additional firemen as a top priority consideration.

Fire Chief Thomas Fogarty has made a request for 21 additional firemen, but city officials on the fire committee have said the request is too high. The city fire department presently has 18 full-time

Other priorities which may be recommended are the purchase of several more police squad cars, the replacement of the sewer system lift station at Meadow Drive and South Street and the pos-sible moving of the garbage landfill on Golf Road, Watson indicated.

The budget also includes the creation of a central communication center to coordinate communication throughout city departments. Watson has called the $91,000 department a priority for the city.

Figures presented last night indicate only about $217,000 in funds may be carried over from the 1973-74 budget to the fiscal year which will begin May 1.

CITY REVENUES will come from sales tax rebates, motor fuel tax funds, real estate tax revenues, state income tax rebates and assorted permit fees.

The review last night of the tentative budget package, which Watson described as "close to its final form," was only the second time city officials on the finance committee have seen the budget.

Ald. Kenneth Retzke (5th) was critical of the city administration's delay in preparing a preliminary budget, leaving the city council only one month to review the package before its passage is required April 30.

"As far as budgetary matters go, the city drags its heels far too long," Retzke said. "In this city, we don't look beyond next week."

He said more time is needed to consider the package and to allow city aldermen to question and make changes in the package.

year budget projections would aid the city in planning for spending.

As budget officer, Watson prepares tentative budget figures for the council to consider, but the city council has the final authority to make changes and apparent the budget figures.

A public hearing on the budget must be held at least two weeks prior to its passage, with copies of the budget available for public scrutiny a reasonable amount of time before that.

Last night the committee tentatively called for a special meeting of city aldermen to consider the budget on April 1 and April 2 before the required public

Other members of the finance committee, including Aldermen Fredrick Jacobson (5th), Daniel Weber (4th) and William Ahrens (2nd), were not present the meeting last night.

Council ruling on annexation seen tonight

A decision by the Rolling Meadows City Council may be made tonight on annexation of 3.2 acres near Plum Grove School for a proposed condominium development

The council is expected to review again the request from Teutsch Associates, Inc. to annex the site located on the west side of Meacham Road adjacent to the Dawngate subdivision. The company is seeking the annexation to build a 21-unit luxury condominium development.

The annexation may be legally blocked, however, because the property barely borders the city limits.

The parcel touches the city's western limits only on 31/2 feet; and City Atty. Donald Rose has warned city officials that the measurement is insufficient to warrant a legal annexa-

Joining the parcel to the city would constitute a "kitty corner" annexation which has been ruled illegal in court, according to Rose.

The development company is seeking the land to build 21 luxury condominium units which would sell for $70,000 to $80,000 each. Seven townhouse-type buildings would house the units, and a recreational club house, swimming pool and tennis courts would be included.

The proposal has met with opposition from homeowners in the Plum Grove Woodlands area near the site. They have said the project would detract from their residential area.

A special city zoning commission has recommended that the project be approved.

The council meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. in the city hall.

Track agrees to pay state back taxes

by KURT BAER

Madison Square Garden Corp. reportedly has agreed to settle a $5.6 million lawsuit filed by the state for back taxes owed by Arlington Park Bace Track.

The taxes are due because of Arlington Park's practice from 1966-71 of dividing rate meets, and thereby paying a lower parimutuel tax.

An assistant in the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott said Monday that Madison Square Garden has agreed to pay the taxes on an installment schedule, probably over the next five years.

Time payments were agreed on, according to Asst. Atty. Gen. Herbert Cap-lan, because Madison Square Garden's financial statements indicated that a onetime payment would cripple racing operations at Arlington Park.

state will not spell an end to racing at Arlington Park, he said, though they will be an added financial burden to the race track which has reported declining profits over the past three years.

Taxes on money wagered at Illinois race tracks are graduated according to the total amount of money bet during a meet. The parimutuel tax starts at 51/4 per cent on the first $5 million bet, and climbs to 91/4 per cent on wagering over

By, in effect, starting the betting total over in the middle of each racing season, Arlington Park paid a maximum of 8.75 per cent during the 1966-71 seasons.

The summer season was divided between Arlington Park and Washington Park jockey clubs, divisions of CTE, although all the actual racing and wagering was done at Arlington Park.

During hearings before the Illinois Racing board in 1971, Scott announced that he would file suit to end the split bookkeeping practice and to collect back taxes for the state.

The announcement forced Arlington Park to reapply for 1972 dates.

The Illinois Supreme Court recently upheld the state's position, but final settlement of the lawsuit had been delayed pending a possible appeal or rehearing of the case.

In addition to the betting taxes, Madison Square Garden will pay 6 per cent interest on the owed money, Caplan said.

Library to purchase computer

The Rolling Meadows Library Board has agreed to purchase the computer terminal presently being used in the library, ending a two-month trial period. The board voted last week to purchase the terminal from Midwest Marketing and Manufacturing of Addison for Board president John Lund said the terminal is "used considerably." Total usage since the terminal's installation Jan. 12 is 4,500 computer minutes or about three hours a day, he added. The computer terminal, which is tied into the High School Dist. 214 computer can only be used when high school classes are not in session, according to an agreement between the library and the high Similar to ones being used in the high school, the terminal consists of a small keyboard used to ask questions and a small television-type screen on which answers appear.

Library director Virginia Connell said the terminal is primarily used by high school students, though it is available to

Applications for census takers in Rolling Meadows are now available at the city hall.

The city will need some 75 applicants in order to select 35 to 40 persons to take the city's special census in May. The city has authorized the expenditure of some $8,000 for the special census. The census is being sought to determine if the 1970 population of 19,178 has increased. An increase would mean additional revenue for the city since state income tax and motor fuel tax rebates are based on population. The census is scheduled to begin May 1 and take about two weeks to complete. It will be supervised by the federal Bureau of the Census. CENSUS TAKERS receive II cents per name correctly recorded in the count. Applicants must fill out forms, be interviewed and take a general aptitude test before they can be considered for the work.

To qualify for census work, persons must be citizens of the United States with a high school education or the equivalent and be at least 18 years old. They are also required to be in good physical condition for walking, climbing stairs and standing.

Applicants also must live in the area and be able to work full time each day that the census is taken. Some evening work will be required.

THE CENSUS bureau prohibits perons from applying who have been fired or discharged from a job because of dishonesty or criminal conduct; who have been convicted of a crime other than a traffic violation since their 21st birthday; who engage in any partisan political activity during the census or who have been employed as a tax assessor, tax collector or law enforcement officer within the past six months.

Data collected in the census will include the names of residents, addresses, ages, race, sex and relationship to the head of the household.

Results of the census are not expected to be made official for about 60 days after the count is completed. CITY OFFICIALS have estimated the population could be as high as 25,000, with most of the increase due to new (continued on page 5)

Cook county officials hit auto emission tests

Cook County Board members squirmed that the county begin testing car emissions for air pollution in 1975.

County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections next year.

The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief Monday under a federal requirement. Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

> Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

> DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent on receiving federal funds to pay for the

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can

Jean Hanlon; chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environmental Control Commission has already taken a stand opposing the ordinance.

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Hlinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

million cars at a cost of $31/2 million. He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards.

Walker's budget gives state educators an uneasy choice

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts operating yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

In a move described by one observer as "politically astute" and by the legislative author of the new state aid formula as "lousy." Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 million increase for next year.

However, Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the state.

The key division of funds, according to observers last week, will be between the state's year-old general school aid formula and the Illinois Downstate Teacher's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT), have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year, rather than match employe contributions

HOWEVER, DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the

retirement program and to provide full funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer," range from a high of $170 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 million of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

BAKALIS HAS ALSO said he will propose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $38 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $140 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. He said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was

HOFFMAN, WHO held a press conference in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both parties, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

Curtis Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental operation.

While the legislative battle continues,

should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for

Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula." The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year, Strong said, "we may get into the position where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it calls for and we'll always be behind."

Applications available for city scholarships

Applications are available at the Rolling Meadows City Hall for high school seniors to apply for one of three scholarships to be awarded by the city.

The scholarships will be awarded to college-bound students and will pay for yearly tuition up to $1,000.

To be eligible, students must attend one of the four high schools serving the city (Rolling Meadows, St. Viator's, Sacred Heart of Mary or Fremd high schools), must have been residents of the city for at least two years and also for the time they are in college, be in the upper one-third of their graduating class and must be planning to attend an accredited two or four-year college or a certified vocational school or technical institute as a full time student.

Applications must be picked up in person at the city hall, 3600 Kirchoff Road. They must be turned in to high school counselors no later than March 25.

Suspect in 3 robberies, too

by TOM VON MALDER

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison System, suspected of three armed robberies in the Northwest suburbs, yesterday was captured in Wheeling after police, with guns drawn, raided a house at 75 Sixth Street, Wheeling.

Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this morning in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on a charge of armed robbery. Kimple, with another prison escapee, John W. Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a.m., Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven Food Store, 1089 W. Dundee Rd., according to Wheeling police.

Wheeling police, yesterday, would not give any other details of the arrest or how they knew of Kimple's presence in

One Sixth Street resident, however, told The Herald he saw about five Wheeling police cars pull up in front of the John M. Korbel residence, 75 Sixth St., and policemen jump out with their weapons drawn. He said Police Chief Peter Guttilla was present during the raid.

From this man and other witnesses, The Herald was able to piece together an account of what allegedly took place on Sixth Street about 1 p.m., yesterday.

AFTER POLICE arrived on the scene, they warned neighbors to go inside their homes and managed to get the Korbels out of the house. The Korbels were then driven several houses north along Sixth Street. Police apparently waited some time before entering the house and Kimpel was allegedly caught as he tried to reave the house by the rear door.

Korbel, who said he was "upset over the whole business," also refused to answer questions. It is believed that Kim-.pel had met a girl who lived at the Korbel home, thus explaining his presence in

Police reportedly removed several bags of merchandise, possibly as evidence, from the house, and a blue car was towed from the scene.

Some $700 cash and eight cartons of cigarets were taken in the Sunday 7-Eleven robbery, according to Wheeling police information released prior to the arrest of Kimpel. Police said two men entered the store, pretended to make purchases until all other customers left and then each pulled a revolver on the

ACTING ON information supplied by Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh. Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on Iil. Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape,

Dem candidates criticize opponents in race for committeeman position

Carsello calls for Morrissey's resignation

Don J. Carsello demanded the immediate resignation of Schaumburg Township Democratic Committeeman Don F. Morrissey at a news conference last Carsello charged Morrissey with being "unqualified to hold public office" and requested an apology for statements made by the incumbent concerning Carsello's national party affiliation.

Morrissey contends Carsello is a Republican based on 1972 primary voting records in Cook County Clerk Stanley Kusper's office. Morrissey has criticized Carsello as a Republican for opposing him for the Democratic Township Committeman post.

Carsello says he did not vote in that election, explaining that he gathered evidence of multiple errors made by 1972 election judges in eight separate township precincts, supporting information reported by the Herald yesterday.

"YET MORRISSEY says because a card marked by a judge exists, this is positive proof my father voted Republican," said campaign coordinator Vince Carsello, Both Carsellos say Morrissey "as an attorney" should know better since there is no 1972 primary ballot application on file.

"He would rather use an unfortunate error made by a confused or tired judge who accidently marked the wrong card as an issue instead of checking all the facts," the younger Carsello added.

Both men said they were shocked at Morrissey's "unsurprised reaction" to alleged negligence and poor training of

"I think it is a cheap dirty trick. These people aren't going to buy it. What he's trying to indicate is that I've joined forces with him.

"No way," Holmes added.

"I'VE CONTACTED my attorneys. The people in their office are checking ino it. "I think this is his way of trying to If there is anything I can sue him for I gain back the support of the people in will. I don't want to be associated with him in any way, shape or form."

Morrissey, prior to mailing the campaign postcards, indicated to the Herald his intention to use the picture including Holmes.

Morrissey said he selected it because it was the best picture he could find of himself and did not mention any intent to imply any current affiliation with Holmes.

a Democratic candidate for Schaumburg Township committeeman "by known Republican Schaumburg village trustees" raises many questions.

Zeroing in on John J. Carsello, Holmes claims "the truth is out - the facts become more evident each day." He says he sees Carsello as a "candidate running for Democratic committeeman who has the endorsement of members of the Re-

Selection of Peskin jury put off to Wednesday

by NANCY COWGER

Jury selection in the trial of Bernard M. Peskin, charged with bribing six former Hoffman Estates officials, apparently will not start until Wednesday morn-

Peskin was indicted last October on 11 coults of bribery, two counts of tax evasion and one of conspiracy to commit bribery in a scandal alleging zoning payoffs in 1968 and 1969 by Kaufman & Broad Homes Inc. for its Barrington Square development in Hoffman Estates. Peskin allegedly accepted $100,000 under the pretense of legal fees as attorney for Kaufman & Broad and distributed about half the money to two former mayors and four ex-trustees, expected to testify during the trial.

The trial was to begin yesterday before U.S. District Court Judge Frank McGarr but was delayed by a hearing on a dismissal motion by Peskin's attorney, Thomas Sullivan.

The motion alleges information for the tax evasion charges was developed through a civil audit by the Internal Revenue Service without Peskin having received Miranda warnings of his rights as a notential defendent. It seeks either dismissal of the indictment or suppression of the tax audit information as evidence in the case.

Asst. U.S. attorneys Anton Valukas and Tyrone Fahner are expected to contend the civil audit was separate from a criminal investigation conducted by IRS intelligence agents.

TESTIFYING yesterday were Richard Hein, the IRS auditor who performed the civil nudit of Peskin's 1989 tax return and Anders Flodin, former IRS intelligence agent, now a group supervisor in the intelligence division.

Flodin told of receiving from Valukas copies of invoices and checks made out from K&B to Peskin's legal firm, Deutsch and Peskin. They totalled

Flodin also said he saw a 1969 tax recome. He said he felt they had no intelligence potential and referred the documents to the civil audit division of

The trial, once it starts, is expected to last at least through the early part of next week.

Expected to testify are former mayors Roy Jenkins and Edward F. Pinger along with former trustees Howard J. Noble, James L. Sloan, Gerard L. Meyer and Herbert C. Gibson, all of whom already have pleaded guilty to accepting Another potential witness is Edward B. Stulberg, not indicted but named as a coconspirator in the indictment. Stulberg acted for K&B in retaining Peskin.

Morrissey said he believes the Democratic Party should "stay independent of ties to any local community group" and commented "we don't want Bob Atcher (mayor of Schaumburg and chairman of SUP) interfering with the operation of the Democratic Organization toward his own ends." "Wherever Mr. Morrissey has gotten his information, it's totally wrong," said Ray Kessell, deputy chairman of SUP and senior Schaumburg trustee.

KESSELL SAID SUP "will not, has not

But Kessell said he believes "this misunderstanding" may have arisen because car tops being used by Carsello "are the same style and colors" of those used by SUP last year.

"The reason is obvious. We had the same campaign manager," Kessell noted, referring to Vince Carsello, son of the candidate

THOUGH SYLVIA graduated from high school at home, she enjoys the atmosphere and extra education she is getting in Schaumburg. At home her studies were mainly concentrated in the area of business and included statistics and accounting in addition to the traditional shorthand and typing courses.

She hopes to become a bilingual secretary when she returns but, with little doubt Sylvia would like to come back to the United States to work some day.

Her parents and a 16-year-old sister, Maria Elena, live in Santa Domingo de Los Colorados, a small city not far from Quito, Ecuador's capital.

Her dad was a farmer until several years ago when he got a job driving a construction truck. Her mother is homemaker.

Cook County Board members squirmed Monday under a federal requirement that the county begin testing car emissions for air pollution in 1975. County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections next year.

The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Fulle questioned county pollution chief Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent on receiving federal funds to pay for the program.

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanlon said the Skokie Environmental Control Commission has already taken a stand opposing the ordinance.

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

million cars at a cost of $31/2 million. He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break

Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose.

Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards.

Paul Derda-super streaker at Schaumburg High School's third annual Ziege's Follies went last week when resident super streaker Paul Derda made an unannounced "In the buff (almost)" appearance.

Derda, Schaumburg director of parks and recreation, streaked in to the surprise of Foilles organizers right after a blackout between skits.

While that is the naked truth, Derda was actually clad in bathing trunks masked by skin-color paper toweling.

It was apparent, observers said, that the streak had a marked effect on the audience but it apparently had some effect on Derda too, since he couldn't be reached at his office Monday. Park staffers sald he was home ill. Maybe it was caused by overexposure?

Anyway, more streaking may be on the agenda at Schaumburg Rotary's Friday luncheon meeting. At least some Rota rians are threatening to get into the act.

But one puckish member, incidentally he happens to be among the group's charter members - if that provides an identity clue, said the only reason he isn't streaking is that he can't run fast

Police Chief Martin J. Conroy says that Cook County States Atty. Bernard Carey has cautioned suburban police to use local ordinances, rather than county or state law, in prosecuting streakers.

Two streaking incidents reported

Two incidents of streaking were reported Sunday night in Schaumburg, the first in the 600 block of Grace Lane and the second in the 700 block of Duxbury Lane.

Police said the two streets are close to each other and the lone streaker in each incident was reported to be a white male about 19 or 20 years old.

ACTING ON information supplied by Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh. Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on III. Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

If village buys facility

Rob Roy golf course would cost homeowner $30 a year

by MARCIA KRAMER

Keeping the Rob Roy Golf Course as open space would cost each Mount Prospect homeowner around $30 a year for the next 20 years.

Mayor Robert D. Telchert Monday suggested the figure - which works out to a total of $600 per household, spread over 20 years — as "a ballpark estimate" that would allow the village to buy the golf course to block apartment development.

The cost estimate given to The Herald was the first publicly given on what it would take for the village to keep the golf course "green."

Teichert also revealed to The Herald yesterday that he will push for a refer-"the earlier the better," on whether the village should buy the golf course. An immediate referendum would bypass a previously announced survey that was to query residents on alternatives besides outright purchase.

Teichert sald a survey "would muddle the picture — where we're going and what we're asking. A survey is fine if it's just used to garner information. But we're beyond the garnering information point. The board knows what's available and what isn't available."

RENEWED INTEREST by the village in buying the golf course was prompted by plans announced by Kenroy Inc., Skokie, to build 4.500 apartment and condominium units on the 180-acre course and adjoining 20-acre driving range. The property is east of Wheeling Road be-tween Camp McDonald Road and Euclid Avenue in unincorporated Wheeling Township, just outside the Mount Prospect village limits. Kenroy has applied for annexation to Mount Prospect and rezoning for the Golfstream project. The village's zoning board of appeals, by a 3-2 vote, last week recommended that the village board reject the petition.

Teichert said he would like to conduct the village-wide referendum on whether to buy the property before the village board even considers the Kenroy peti-

He said he has received split comments on Rob Roy from residents. "People in the area close to it are anxious to buy it. Other people further away can't see spending money on it."

One resident of the south part of town told The Herald many residentsthere resent being asked to help fund purchase of the golf course north of Mount Prospect because other parts of town did not come to the aid of the southern portion when apartments were being proposed there.

A referendum would have to be approved by more than half of the voters; casting ballots in order to authorize the village board to proceed with purchase of the golf course could be bought for $6 million to $7 million, slightly below the $8 million to $9 million value placed on the property by Kenroy.

IF VOTERS IN a referendum reject village purchase of Rob Roy, the village board would be faced with three likely alternatives: Approve the project as outlined by Kenroy, approve a scaled-down version of the project with lower density and more open space on the perimeter, or turn down any project altogether, forcing the developer to seek rezoning from Cook County.

Village trustees contacted yesterday by The Herald, as expected, chose village purchase of the golf course as first preference. None supported the Kenroy plan for 4,500 units, though some indicated they may be willing to compromise.

Trustee Patrick J. Link described the proposed 4,500 units as "a total absurdity," adding, "I'm firmly convinced we should sell the project (buying the course) to the community.

He said he could accept "at most 1,500 units" on the golf course, and then only if the developer turned over property along the outer rim of the parcel to the village for public use.

Trustee O. T. Gustus, who also said the proposed density is "much too high," said he "could look kindly" toward the project if it were scaled down to 3,000 to 3,300 units and if property on the per-imeter were left open. "If he (Kenroy) did those things and there were no other undesirable aspects, I wouldn't say I would vote for it, but I would certainly look kindly toward it."

TRUSTEE Richard N. Hendricks said he was "amazed" at the number of units proposed to be built, and said he would continue to pursue efforts to buy the golf course. A recent letter from the Illinois Department of Conservation regarding a possible state grant is "the most encouraging thing I've seen so far," he said.

Trustee George B. Anderson characterized the proposed development as "a city in itself" and the proposed five 12-story towers in the project as "a city in the "There is lots of room for compromise," he said. Trustees E. F. Richardson and Ken-

High school attendance boundary shifts approved

The High School Dist. 214 Board of Education last night approved recommended changes in attendance boundaries involving Forest View, Prospect, Wheeling and Hersey high schools. By a 4-to-1 vote with two members absent, the board approved an administration recommendation that next year the area south of Weller Creek in Mount Prospect Dist. 57 be shifted from the Forest View to Prospect attendance area and that the portion of Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 south of Palatine Road be transferred from Hersey to Wheeling. The board also approved giving a series of options to students living in the affected areas. Under the options, students who have now started at either Forest View or Hersey; who will be incoming freshmen next year, or who will have brothers and sisters in either school next year, will be able to choose to remain at Forest View or Hersey. THE BOARD'S ACTION came in response to enrollment projections which Indicate that II boundaries were unchanged, Forest View will be substantially over its 2,500 student capacity for the next five years, and that Wheeling High School will be under its capacity for the same period.

Supt. Edward Gilbert, in explaining the recommended shift of the Dist. 21 area from Hersey to Wheeling, said that as a result, the reduced enrollment at Hersey "will give us the opportunity to use Hersey the way it was designed to be used, as a vocational education center for students from all over the district."

The board's decision came after 11/2 hours of discussion with a crowd of over 100 persons, most of whom came from the Dist. 21 area. Residents of that area last year objected to the same proposed boundary change, which the board was then considering along with changes involved in the opening of Buffalo Grove

The group last year was led by Warren Schablinger, who is now a member of the Dist. 214 board. Schabinger was the only board member to vote against the proposed changes last night.

Members of the audience explained that they opposed the shift of their children from Hersey to Wheeling because, in the words of one, "We want to build continuity in our community." One woman objected to the board giving options to children whose older brothers and sisters will be attending Hersey. She said, "I think you're discriminating against my two children because they don't have an older brother or sister who goes to Her-

Planners told to define study limits

The Mount Prospect Planning Commission will undertake a study of what areas should be examined in devising a plan to revitalize the village's central busines

The planning commission was given the task at a Thursday night meeting of various village officials. The commission's report, expected to be submitted in about a month, will outline what areas to focus on in preparing a revitalization plan - such as planning, landscaping and financing - and will recommend a firm or firms to undertake the study.

The commission will consult with Kenneth Tucker, of Kenroy Inc., Skokie, and Rolf Campbell, of the Lake Bluff land planning firm bearing his name, in preparing the report. Both firms had been contacted by Mayor Robert D. Teichert, and Tucker was present at the meeting. A decision had been expected to be reached at the meeting about hiring an outside planning consultant, but it was decided instead to await the recommendations of the planning commission.

Some questions were raised about the objectivity of Kenroy's participating in village planning in the downtown area, because the firm had earlier submitted plans - that were rejected by the village - for tearing down the abandoned Central School and replacing it with a highrise building for the elderly.

WHEN TRUSTEE Patrick J. Link asked Tucker about a possible conflict because of his firm's financial interest Tucker responded: "The company is not married to any piece of real estate that falls within the four-block area" bounded by Central Road on the north, Northwest Highway on the south, Maple Street on the east and Main Street on the west.

One village trustee who did not attend the meeting, Richard N. Hendricks, said in a letter he did not believe any outside planners are needed, because the village could rely on its planner, planning commission, downtown study group (a subcommittee of the planning commission) and Chamber of Commerce in coming up with a downtown plan.

The letter was attacked publicly by Trustee George B. Anderson, who called it "unfounded." Each of the four groups saying they did not have the time or expertise to draw up a downtown plan. Tucker tossed out some possible ideas for redeveloping downtown Mount Prospect, such as a large hotel and highrise apartment building, but the plans did not appeal to many officials at the meeting.

"A high-rise apartment building, restaurants and dancing girls . . . just offhand, that doesn't paint a delightful picture for me," Teichert said Friday. "We need to know what viable plans are available and get some input from the community.'

AFTER THE planning commission submits its report and an outside planner is hired, it is expected to take another six months to a year until a revitalization plan is drafted.

Teichert said he is anxious to get the ball rolling on making plans. "We can sit here and debate and form committees and all that, but the (new Mount Prospect State) bank is going to built, Central School is going to be developed or sold . .

"Even if I sound a little sarcastic about it, I'm really not interested in daydreams and pretty plans. I've been in other villages where they display models of their proposed downtown. The models are 10 years old and still sitting there."

Cook county officials hit auto emission tests

Cook County Board members squirmed that the county begin testing car emissions for air pollution in 1975.

County Board Pres. George Dunne and Comr. Floyd Fulle both criticized the federal Environmental Protection Agency for requiring the county to begin the inspections next year. The two officials were open in their disdain for the federal requirement that all suburban cars be tested annually as part of a plan to clean up the air in Chicago's central business district.

Monday under a federal requirement Philip Mole to learn that all suburban cars will have to be inspected annually even though only 32 per cent of the cars in suburban areas are actually driven in the Chicago Loop.

> Fulle also said the air in the suburbs is more than clean enough to eliminate any need for car inspections.

> DUNNE SUGGESTED the county might avoid having to charge car owners for the annual tests if it passed its auto emission inspection ordinance contingent

Fulle questioned county pollution chief on receiving federal funds to pay for the

The two board members finally urged Monday's hearing on the county's ordinance be continued until March 21 so that opinions of suburban environmental groups and of more county residents can be collected.

Jean Hanlon, chairman of the Arlington Heights Environmental Control Commission, suggested the board hold such a public hearing after making copies of the proposed law available for study. Mrs. Hanion said the Skokie Environmental

Control Commission has already taken a stand opposing the ordinance

The proposed law would require not only annual inspections, but also that motorists whose cars fail the test have the cars repaired and reinspected. The ordinance would not allow the owner to register his car with the Illinois Secretary of State and obtain license plates if it doesn't meet pollution standards.

MOLE TOLD the county commissioners that the proposed ordinance will require an additional 150 county employes to operate five testing stations for 1.2

million cars at a cost of $31/2 million.

He said that even if some federal money is available the county may still have to charge for the inspections to break

Comr. Mathew Bieszczat said car owners would resent the "additional tax" the inspection fee would impose.

Fulle said it was unfair of the EPA to force the county to inspect cars while at the same time giving auto manufacturers an additional year to meet pollution standards.

by WANDALYN RICE

Gov. Daniel Walker's proposed budget for education is apparently going to make educators choose between providing money for the state school aid formula, which gives school districts operating yearly funds, and funding the state teachers' retirement system.

In a move described by one observer as "politically astute" and by the legislative author of the new state aid formula as "lousy," Walker has proposed a state education budget calling for a $138 million increase for next year.

However, Walker has not made any recommendation for how the increase should be divided among the various education-related programs financed by the

The key division of funds, according to observers last week, will be between the state's year-old general school aid formula and the Illinois Downstate Teacher's Retirement System, the pension system set up for all Illinois educators working outside Chicago.

State teachers' organizations, including the Illinois Education Assn. (IEA) and Illinois Federation of Teachers (IFT). have been pressing in recent years for the state to increase its contribution to the retirement fund to the level required by law. In past years the legislature has only appropriated enough money to cover pension payments in any given year, rather than match employe contributions

HOWEVER, DONALD Strong, superintendent of Arlington Heights Elementary Dist. 25 and a member of the task force that drew up the state school aid formula passed last year, said the governor's proposal apparently does not provide enough money both to increase funding of the retirement program and to provide full funding for the new state aid formula.

Strong said estimates of how much will be required to provide districts with all the money called for under the new aid formula, called the "resource equalizer," range from a high of $170 million to $138 million. Strong said the higher figure is probably inaccurate because decreasing school enrollments and increasing assessed values of real estate across the state tend to cut down the amount of education money which must come from the

State School Supt. Michael Bakalis has also proposed an education budget with a $138 million increase over last year. His budget, however, specifies that $28 million of the increase will go to the retirement fund and $8 million to the special purpose grants for school districts. The $102 million left for the state aid formula would provide about 92 per cent funding.

BAKALIS HAS ALSO said he will propose to the legislature changes in school management and accounting systems which he says will save $38 million next year. The $38 million saved plus the $102 million for the state aid formula would mean schools would have a $140 million increase in general revenue, according to Bakalis.

State Rep. Gene Hoffman, R-Elmhurst, the legislator who developed the "resource equalizer" last year, attacked the governor's budget and Bakalis' proposal. He said, "The basic problem as I see it is that we are not keeping the commitment we made when we passed the bill and the governor signed it last

Hoffman said he presented estimates of how much the new formula would cost, including the $170 million figure for next year, before the formula was

HOFFMAN, WHO held a press conference in Chicago over the weekend attended by legislative leaders from both parties, added, "I intend to see that the formula is fully funded." He said extra funds for the formula could be provided from the budget surplus the governor is projecting without cutting back on money for the teacher retirement system.

Curtis Plott, executive director of the IEA, has attacked Walker's and Bakalis's proposals because he says combining state school aid with the retirement fund money in a budget is "mixing apples and oranges.'

An aide to Plott said Friday the executive director "doesn't know of any other instance where public employes have been forced to choose between what is rightfully theirs in a retirement fund and money for general governmental operation.'

While the legislative battle continues,

Strong said he thinks school districts should assume that Bakalis's proposal for splitting up the new state money will pass when they plan their budgets for next vear.

"I think districts will be well advised to anticipate 92 per cent funding," he said. "Each district should plan to protect itself in its budget."

Strong also said that 92 per cent funding of the formula this year "risks deferring the implementation of the new formula." The "resource equalizer" was designed to provide each school district in the state with $1,260 per pupil and to shift some of the burden of school funding away from local property tax. It was to be phased in over a four year period. If the formula is not fully funded this year, Strong said, "we may get into the position where the legislature will just keep funding the formula at less than it calls for and we'll always be behind."

Writer's work in 'Chicago Guide'

Mount Prospect's own Edith Freund may be off on a whole new thing! She's sold a story, a personal essay, to "Chicago Guide" magazine.

Edith, mother of five, who lives at 700 5. Main St., is well known in the area as a writer. Her articles have appeared in various local newspapers, including The Herald. This is the first time, however, she will have a by line in a magazine.

Edith is also known in the area for having served on the board of Dist. 57 for the past three years. She is now running for reelection

The story Edith sold is at present untitled, but it tells of a suburban women who takes "Bus No. 1" for a reide to downtown Chicago. "Chicago Guide" is a magazine which contributors to WTTW automatically receive, but it may be purchased independently also. Edith wrote the article as a result of being involved in what she calls the "oldest floating writer's workshop in existence," the Off Campus Writers Workshop in Wilmette.

An interesting thing about Robin's Nest -- it's run by Pat Finke, who was a teacher at Lincoln School in Mount Prospect for eight years. She left the school district and opened the shop last August

PUBLIC WORKS Director Dave Creamer rescued the last Mount Prospect original electric street light from the buildozer last week. The concrete pole with ornamental galas was located at the former Henry Ehard residence at 106 S. Maple St. The razing is to make way for the new Mount Prospect State Bank building to be built.

Creamer, a 31-year resident of Mount Prospect and a village worker for more than 20 years, realized the importance of the aged fixture and had it removed. The light post is being stored in a warehouse

The men, both described as in their twenties, then used surgical tape to bind Loftus and took the money from the cash

ACTING ON information supplied by Streamwood police, Loftus allegedly identified one of the two robbers as Larsh, Larsh had been arrested by Streamwood police and charged with two armed robberies in that suburb. The robberies were March 2 at the Pizza Hut on Ill. Rte. 19 and March 5 at the 7-Eleven Food Store on Bartlett Road. Both Kimpel and Larsh have been charged in these two robberies by Streamwood po-

Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel; escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are eventually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

Arlington Park agrees to pay state back taxes

by BURT BAER

Madison Square Garden Corp reportedly has agreed to settle a $5.6 million lawsuit filed by the state for back taxes owed by Ailington Park Race Track

The taxes are due because of Arlington Pack's practice from 1966-71 of dividing its summer racing season into two separate meets and thereby paying a lower parmutuel tax

An assistant in the office of Ill Atty Gen William S oft said Monday that Madison Square Garden has agreed to pay the taxes on an installment schedule, probably over the next five years

Time payments were agreed on, according to Asst Atty Gen Herbert Caplan because Madison Square Garden's ftnancial statements indicated that a one-time payment would cripple racing operations at Arlington Park

Jack Loome president of Arlington Park and a director of Madison Square Garden Corp., called the settlement, "a bitter pill But we're going to have to digest it

Underpayment of the taxes took place when Arlington Pack was owned by Chi cago Thoroughbred Enterprises (CTE), headed by Marje Everett who sold the track to Madison Square Garden Corp, which operated in a similar manner until Scott's court challenge CTE has since been dissolved

"The indebtedness was incurred by my predecessor and we have no avenue of recovery against her ' Loome sald

THE SUBSTANFIAL payments due the state will not spell an end to racing at Arlington Park, he sald, though they will be an added financial burden to the race track which has reported declining profits over the past timee years.

Taxes on money wagered at Illinois race tracks are graduated according to

By, in effect, starting the betting total over in the middle of each racing season Arlington Park paid a maximum of 8 75 per cent during the 1966-71 seasons

The summer season was divided beween Arlington Park and Washington Park jockey clubs divisions of CTE, although all the actual racing and wagering was done at Arlington Park

During hearings before the Illinois Racing board in 1971, Scott announced that he would file suit to end the split bookkeeping practice and to collect back taxes for the state

The announcement forced Arlungton Park to reapply for 1972 dates

The Illinois Supreme Court recently upheld the state's position, but final settlement of the lawsuit had been delayed pending a possible appeal or reheating of

In addition to the betting taxes, Madison Square Garden will pay 6 per cent interest on the owed money, Capian said

Four high schools involved

New boundaries for schools

The High School Dist 214 Board of Education last night approved recommended changes in attendance boundaries involving Forest View, Prospect, Wheeling and Hersey high schools

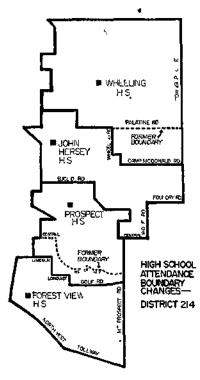

By a 4-to-1 vote with two members absent, the board approved an administration recommendation that next year the area south of Weller Creek in Mount Prospect Dist 57 be shifted from the Forest View to Prospect attendance area and that the portion of Wheeling Buffalo Grove Dist 21 south of Palatine Road be hours of discussion with a crowd of over transferred from Hersey to Wheeling

The board also approved giving a series of options to students hving in the affected areas Under the options, students who have now started at either Forest View or Hersey, who will be incoming freshmen next year or who will have brothers and sisters in either school next year, will be able to choose to remain at Forest View or Hersey

THE BOARD'S ACTION came in response to enrollment projections which indicate that if boundaries were unchanged, Forest View will be substantially over its 2,500 student capacity for the next five years, and that Wheeling High School will be under its capacity for the same period

Supt Edward Gilbert, in explaining the recommended shift of the Dist 21 area from Hersey to Wheeling said that as a result, the reduced enrollment at Hersey ' will give us the opportunity to use Hersey the way it was designed to be used, as a vocational education center for students from all over the district '

The board's decision came after 11/2

100 persons, most of whom came from the Dist 21 area Residents of that area last year objected to the same proposed boundary change which the board was then considering along with changes in volved in the opening of Buffalo Grove High School

The group last year was led by Warren Schabinger who is now a member of the Dist 214 board Schabinger was the only board member to vote against the proposed changes last night

Members of the audience explained that they opposed the shift of their children from Hersey to Wheeling because in the words of one "We want to build contimuity in our community" One woman objected to the board giving options to children whose older brothers and sisters will be attending Hersey She said 'I think you're discriminating against my two children because they don't have an older brother or sister who goes to Her-

Wisconsin prison escapee nabbed by Wheeling police

by TOM VON MALDER

An escapee from the Wisconsin State Prison System, suspected of three armed robberies in the Northwest suburbs, yesterday was captured in Wheeling after police, with guns drawn, raided a house at 75 Sixth Street, Wheeling.

Thomas Kimple will be arraigned this morning in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court on a charge of armed robbery. Kimple, with another prison escapee, John W. Larsh, is accused of the 1:30 a.m., Sunday robbery of the 7-Eleven Food Store, 1089 W. Dun-dee Rd., according to Wheeling police.

Wheeling police, yesterday, would not give any other details of the arrest or how they knew of Kiniple's presence in the village.

One Sixth Street resident, however, told The Herald he saw about five Wheeling police cars pull up in front of the John M. Korbel residence, 75 Sixth St., and policemen jump out with their weap-ons drawn. He sald Police Chief Peter Guttilla was present during the raid.

From this man and other witnesses, The Herald was able to piece together an account of what allegedly took place on Sixth Street about 1 p.m., yesterday.

AFTER POLICE arrived on the scene, they warned neighbors to go inside their homes and managed to get the Korbels out of the house. The Korbels were then driven several houses north along Sixth Street. Police apparently walted some time before entering the house and Kimpel was allegedly caught as he tried to seave the house by the rear door.

Korbel, who said he was "upset over the whole business," also refused to anpel had met a girl who lived at the Korbel home, thus explaining his presence in the house.

Police reportedly removed several bags of merchandise, possibly as evidence, from the house, and a blue car was towed from the scene.

Some $700 cash and eight cartons of cigarets were taken in the Sunday 7-Eleven robbery, according to Wheeling police information released prior to the arrest of Kimpel. Police said two men entered the store, pretended to make purchases until all other customers left and then each pulled a revolver on the clerk. Patrick Loftus, of 102 E. Palatine Rd., Prospect Heights.

The men, both described as in their twenties, then used surgical tape to bind Loftus and took the money from the cash

> Also picked up by Streamwood police was Thomas Weaver, who apparently was not involved in any armed robberies and has not been charged. However, Weaver, with Larsh and Kimpel, escaped Feb. 22 from the Union Grove State Prison Farm in Wisconsin. During that escape, a truck was stolen and a guard was supposedly severely beaten, Streamwood police said.

> KIMPEL WILL be turned over to Streamwood police today, following his appearance in Arlington Heights court. They have a warrant issued for his arrest which allows no bond. All three men are being kept in the Cook County Jail.

According to police the men are even-tually expected to be returned to Wisconsin to face charges in that state. It is not known why the men were serving prison sentences at the time of their escape.

Family education group opens chapter in village

The Rudolph Driekurs Unit of the Family Education Assn. of Skokie has opened an Arlington Heights chapter.

The Family Education Assn. is a nonfee, volunteer and membership community organization devoted to the information and education to parents concerning ways to effectively handle day-to-day problems in children's behavior and to encourage self-reliance and happier citizenship for children within the family

There are no professional fees or admission requirements. Any parent or teenager concerned about relationships with children, or interested in learning more about children's relationships with "parental adults" are invited to attend.

Any parent or teenager is invited to observe a demonstration counseling session in which a family will receive counseling with Mrs. Marilyn Hockberg, family counselor. An introduction and description of the education services to parents and their families will also be pre-

The next session will be held Thursday, at 8 p.m. at Miner Junior High School, 1101 E. Miner St., Arlington Heights, No children are allowed at counseling sessions unless they are members of the family to be counseled that evening.

For further information call Dorothy Vlach at 537-1257; Kay Nurton at 299-1374; Hope Hornstein, 966-8695.

PTA notes

"Be Aware and Be Involved" is the theme of the Dun-Lake Council of PTA Council luncheon Wednesday from 12:30 to 3 p.m. at Riley School, 1209 Burr Oak, Arlington Heights.

Dorothy Benner, president of the Illinois Congress of Parents and Teachers will be guest at the event, which is open to all PTA members of the council. Dun-Lake Council represents member schools in district 21 which has schools in Arlington Heights and Dist. 23 in Prospect

Mrs. Benner was quoted in the February issue of "Illinois PTA Bulletin" for stating that PTA members should be more involved in community wide matters; rather than concern themselves with fundraising for their schools.

Hostesses for the luncheon will be Sally Benoit, council secretary and Sandy Burrows, council president. Babysitting will be available by calling Mrs. Burrows at

Hammerli wins

Members of the Arlington Teachers Assn. and the Illinois Political Action Committee for Education screening committee interviewed and voted to endorse Richard Hammerli in the School Dist. 25 board election.

"Hammerli is a highly qualified candidate," said Dave Robinson, a committee

The screening committee previously screened and recommended four other residents to the school board race. They include Joan Klussmann, 3 E. Canterbury; Robert Kazlauski, 639 N. Kaspar; James Foster, 1416 N. Walnut, and H. Robert Powell, 110 S. Kennicott.

Incumbents Mrs. Klussmann and Kazlauski, were endorsed by the School Dist. 25 nominating committee, better known as caucus. Foster and Powell said they will not run without caucus endorsement.

Hemmerli of 931 N. Chestnut, will run as an independent in the school board race. Mrs. Klussmann, Kazlauski and Hammerli will run for two seats in the April 13 election.

The screening committee of the teachers group said the interviews are conducted to determine if a candidate is qualified to run in the election. Unlike the caucus, which endorses as many candidates as there are seats, the committee may recommend as few or as many candidates they find qualified.

UFO arrives: can spring be far off?

An Arlington Heights couple reported sighting an unidentified flying object Sunday night. According to police reports, Wayne A.

Knotowski, of 403 W. Waverly, and his wife saw a bright light hanging motionnorth of the village about 9:30 Sunday night. They said the light suddenly dropped straight down and then flew straight up and disappeared.

Arlington Heights police investigated the incident, but could find nothing.
